"Stop Accidents In The Home" Paper At St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid

Society Met At The Home of Mrs. L. Rodgers — Good Programme Much Enjoyed

The members of St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. Louis Rodgers on Thursday last for the regular monthly meeting. There was a good attendance of members and neighbours.

The meeting opened with prayer by the President, Mrs. Ken. Ray. Following the singing of a hymn, Mrs. Foster read a Scripture lesson with explanation, followed by prayer.

Mrs. Ray discussed business pertaining to the expense of the church decoration and refinishing of the church silverware.

Mrs. Rodgers presided during the program prepared by Mrs. Waterfall, Mrs. D. Rodgers, Mrs. E. Foster and Mrs. Searies and herself.

Following a hymn and prayer, Mrs. Foster gave a humorous reading entitled, "The Ladies' Aid." Mrs. Ken. Ray followed with a short reading, "Are You An Active Member or Do You Just Belong?"

Mrs. Pipher (Rev. Walker's sister) delighted all with two piano selections. Miss Gena Spyre gave a reading entitled, "Meeting At The Table."

Mrs. Chas. Fargey gave the paper on Home Economics dealing with "Safety In The Home."

STOP ACCIDENTS IN THE HOME

The home, which should be the safest and happiest place in the world produces more accidents than does industry and is second only to traffic. Medical and hospital bills for the care of home-accident victims amount yearly to hundreds of thousands of dollars, hundreds of individuals are permanently disabled and scores of new graves are filled each year by persons accidentally killed at home.

The farm home as well as the city home contributes to this horrible annual toll. Observance of a few preventive regulations and the diligent exercise of intelligent watchfulness can reduce the hazards very greatly.

By studying the causes of accidents and by correcting the conditions which cause them, time, energy, sorrow and suffering can be saved and all the family given added assurance of greater enjoyment.

Accidents do not "just happen"; there is always a cause. An alert constructive attitude towards safety conditions in the home is essential. Find the danger spots and make them safe.

A loose handrail on the back stairs may result in a serious accident — fix it. A loose board on the porch may trip you, your child or a visitor and leave a permanent injury — fix it. Fixing the known hazard is the first step.

Falls are responsible for more accidents and accidental deaths in the home than other causes and many of these occur in the bedroom. In bedrooms, more than in any other room, people wander in the dark or in a half-awake condition. Darkness and sleepiness are the things to avoid. In bedrooms the hazards to which you may be exposed are rumpled rugs, loose rugs on polished floors, misplaced furniture, carelessly dropped shoes and children's toys. These menace life and limb.

The first rule of safety at night is to "light the way." It is possible in homes equipped with electric lights to have a switch near the bed which turns on the bed or bedroom lamp before you step beyond your bed. If you haven't a safety device like this to "light the way" from your bed, you should work out a plan to avoid stepping out in the dark. If you do not have electricity in the home a flashlight at the bedside or a match and a candle may be used.

Never put out the light at night in a bedroom that has things littered over the floor — be tidy.

It is too bad we cannot have shiny floors which are not slippery. Perhaps we don't need them shiny — surely life and limbs are more important. If you can develop a floor finish that

A real estate deal of interest was completed recently when Mrs. G. L. Clute disposed of her property on Edward Street to Clarence Sutherland of Stirling. Mr. Sutherland plans to take possession in the near future.

Family Reunion

In Honour of Sister's Homecoming

A family reunion in honour of Mrs. Alice Hoard, of Elk Point, Alta., who is paying her home district a visit for the first time in 28 years, was held at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wells, Oak Lake, on Sunday, August 24th. During the reunion dinner Mrs. Hoard was the recipient of a birthday gift, with the presentation being made by her brother, Bob Patterson.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Patterson, Douglas and Tommy, of Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. John B. Patterson, and Mr. and Mrs. Glen Patterson, and daughter, of Coryville; Mr. and Mrs. Don Williams, of Belleville; Mrs. James Linn and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Linn and daughter, Ruth, Mt. Pleasant, and Mrs. W. C. Pitman, Miss Grace Pitman and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wells and family, all of Stirling.

Celebrated His 92nd Birthday

Surrounded by members of his family, Mr. Robert Eggleton quietly celebrated his 92nd birthday on Tuesday. During the day he was the recipient of many messages and congratulatory cards from relatives, while a number of his good friends in the Village called to extend good wishes. Members of his family present for the occasion were four daughters, Mrs. L. Phillips and Miss Ivy Eggleton, of Belleville; Mrs. Benson, of Ivanhoe, and Mrs. W. Blakely, of Madoc; and four sons, Irvin, of Belleville, and Messrs. Hector, Sam and Roy Eggleton, of Stirling, as well as several grandchildren. Rev. and Mrs. W. H. V. Walker were also guests on the occasion.

will be shiny but not slippery you will be a human benefactor of no mean account.

There are three main causes of fatal burns — overturned oil lamps, defective wiring and smoking in bed.

Is it not strange that in all the years that oil lamps have been in use, nobody has invented one that would automatically go out if tipped or which contained a compartment with fire extinguisher in sufficient quantity to put out any fire that could be started. It is not too late. There are still many oil lamps being sold. If now you use oil lamps in your home, be sure that they rest on good firm bases and sit upon steady tables.

If you have any amateur electric wiring in your home it should be checked by a competent electrician. You can never tell when wires are likely to go wrong and start a most destructive fire.

Smoking in bed is a practice for which there is no excuse. Broken glass, sharp edged toys, pins or needles, razor blades or sciss-

Stirling-Foxboro Series Tied

Locals Won Second Game of Series 13 To 7 — Score In Six Innings of The Contest

In a thrill packed game played before a couple of hundred of fans at the Stirling Fair Grounds on Thursday night, Stirling defeated Foxboro 13 to 7 to even the final play-offs in the Centre Hastings Softball League at a game each.

The winners got off to a flying start when they pushed across three runs in the first inning and scored in every inning but the fifth. They added one in the second and three more in the third on a single by Fraser, a double by McGee and Bailey's long fly which went for a homer when Tummon fell in fielding it. Three more runs crossed the plate in the sixth on four singles and a walk and two in the seventh on a single by Bastedo and a double by Rodgers, and a walk.

Foxboro got their first run in the second on "Tip" Tummon's triple and a wild throw, and pushed four more across in the fourth when Rodgers gave up six hits, including a triple by Churchill and a double by Scott, and a walk. They added one in the fifth on a single by Sine and Scott's second double of the game. Their final run came in the seventh when Rodgers gave up three straight walks and McCaughen hit a double.

Outside the inning when he gave up six hits and the seventh when his control wobbled, Rodgers pitched a steady brand of ball and was given good support by his fielders. He also contributed two singles and a double. Tummon, for the losers, was not as steady as usual and allowed his opponents to score in every inning but the fifth.

The fielding feature was a catch by McGee, local third baseman of a drive to his left. Bastedo and Stewart also made several fine catches in the outfield.

Scott, with two doubles, a single and a walk, led the losers in the hitting department, with E. Tummon and Churchill also contributing triples.

The Line-ups

Stirling — Dafoe, 1b; Bastedo, If; Rodgers, p; Fraser, c; Armstrong, ss; McGee, 3b; Montgomery, 2b; Bailey, rf; Stewart, cf.

Foxboro — McCaughen, 1b; Churchill, c; Priest, 2b; E. Tummon, p; F. Tummon, If; Shorten, rf; Sine, ss; Ketcheson, 3b; Scott, cf.

Foxboro 0 1 0 4 1 0 1-7

THIRD GAME ENDS IN TIE

A 14-14 tie ball game was the best Foxboro and Stirling could do in the third game of the finals of the Centre Hastings Softball League played at the local Fair Grounds last night. Both teams gave a weird exhibition of ball at times and the largest crowd of the season were treated to plenty of thrills.

Foxboro took the lead in the first inning with two runs only to have Stirling come back with three in the latter part of the same inning. In the second Rodgers gave up four hits, one a double by F. Tummon, and two walks for six runs. However, the locals worked Tummon for three walks and three hits, one a triple by Rodgers for five runs and it was a tie ball game at the end of the second. Foxboro drove Rodgers from the box in the third when they counted five runs on three walks and four hits, to take 13-8 lead. Ketcheson finished the game for Stirling and gave up only one run over the rest of the route while the locals counted two in the fifth and four in the sixth to tie the count at 14-14.

Rodgers with two triples and a single and Dafoe with a double and two singles, led the Stirling hitters while Ketcheson, Priest and Churchill were the best for Foxboro. Both E. Tummon and D. Bastedo, respective left fielders, and "Micky" Armstrong provided the fielding features.

Bank Hours To Be Changed

Notices are being displayed at the Bank of Montreal announcing a change in banking hours on Saturday mornings, and customers are requested to do their business from 9 to 11 o'clock instead of from 9.30 to noon, as formerly. The change becomes effective this Saturday.

Briefly, the idea behind the change is to give the bank's staff a better break on their week-end time. The old idea that bankers worked from only 10 to 3 — to the envy of most people — has long been exploded. This was never true, for much remains for the banker to do after his doors are closed.

With the great burden of work on banking personnel, which developed during the war and which has carried into the peace, it has been necessary for bank staffs to work much overtime for a number of years. It is frequently the case on Saturdays, with the traditional public closing at noon, for the staff to be obliged to work on until anywhere from 1 to 3 p.m., which, to say the least, goes hard on plans for a Saturday afternoon outing or a week-end's fishing.

Customers as a whole will be glad to see this relief for the people serving them at the bank who will thus be helped to a little more leisure time.

Presbyterian Rally At St. Andrew's

Outstanding Addresses And Good Reports Heard By Representatives of Auxiliaries

Representatives from the various auxiliaries of Kingston Presbyterian held a most enthusiastic Rally in St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, on Wed. Sept. 3rd. Members from Gananoque on the east to Trenton on the west gathered to make plans for the fall work and to receive inspiration.

Mrs. D. L. Fleming, of Belleville presided over the meeting. Devotional exercises were taken by the Trenton Auxiliary with Mrs. Chas. Brown reading the Scripture Lesson and Mrs. (Rev.) McLean leading in prayer.

Miss Nesbitt, of Kingston, gave the treasurer's report. She reported $1129 had been raised already this year with an allocation of $2700. She was most hopeful that this would be met.

Mrs. R. A. Hermiston gave the address of welcome. She gave a fine sincere message of greeting and urged for greater missionary endeavours.

Mrs. Craighead and Mrs. W. A. Mathews, of Burnbrae, sang a duet which was much enjoyed.

Mrs. Jessie Craig, of Belleville, gave a fine missionary address. Our church has assumed a great share in the missionary work of the church. Do we realize our responsibility? She divided her message into four parts, pray, study, give and do. If we give willingly lovingly and sacrificially we will profit much ourselves. Let us pray that God will call young men and women into leadership for the church. Mrs. (Rev.) Turner, of Burnbrae, gave another fine address. In her opening remarks she expressed great pleasure at being in the Kingston Presbyterian. She asked for co-operation in her work.

She gave a fine address on, "The Present Situation in India". More and more minds are turning toward India. India is unique in that its problems touch all the nations of the world. We should be especially concerned about the future of India. India's many streams flow from the mountains to the sea and give life to the people.

To understand any problem we must go to the source. She traced the history of India from centuries ago to the present time. Wars and struggles ensued with only short intervals of peace. But rule came and went and in closing she urged, What of the future? Christian missions must go on. So with the love of God in our hearts let us make a new attempt to strive for peace and brotherhood.

Mrs. Fleming, of Belleville, very graciously thanked both speakers for their heart searching messages.

Miss Vankleek, of Madoc, in her most sincere fashion thanked the Stirling ladies for their preparation and the speakers for their messages. She also added a word for those who sang. "We must be deeply concerned about the affairs of the day", was her note.

Rev. W. H. V. Walker brought greetings from Presbytery after which he closed the meeting with prayer.

The ladies were then invited to the Sunday School rooms where the Stirling ladies served a delightful lunch. The ladies in charge deserve great credit for nothing had been left undone to make this hour the highlight of the year.

Uncle Hy Says

(Copyright 1947 H. M. Moore)

When September comes dad says "Son, we've worked real hard, we've earned some fun, the harvest's in, the threshing's through, there's some fall plowing still to do, but it can wait, we'll forget our cares, we're off to see the country fairs."

And many sticks up in her very best, for after all she's earned a rest, and dad puts on his Sunday suit, 'bout 39 it was a beaut, while me, well I don't go much for style, so what I've got lasts me a while.

Well every year that is our way, eleven months we slave, and one we play, we see the races, we see the stock, and visit and chat around the clock, then as the end of the month draws near, we're back on the land for another year.

What Others Say!

YOUNG DOCTORS

There are years of expensive training necessary before a young man can become a fully qualified doctor. Thousands of our youths are nearing completion of that training. Any importation of European doctors on a large scale now would tend to block off the opportunities of our own boys who will be ready in a year or two, the next five years, in fact, there will be large numbers of new Canadian doctors completing their training each spring. We owe them the fullest opportunity.—St. Catherine's Standard.

GETTING TIRED AND SICK

(Pembroke Bulletin)

Who? Canadian citizens generally, who go about their daily work, trying to make the two ends meet at the end of the week, listening to the radio and hearing hour after hour about rising prices, eggs going up, butter going up, tea and coffee gone up, bread going up, strikes here, there, and everywhere for higher pay.

The war has been over for a long time and this unsettled, chaotic condition of unrest seems an unsettled as during the worst days of 1946.

This condition cannot go on forever. There must be a stopping point somewhere and it's high time that we had reached it.

And in it all the government is as dumb as an oyster and as helpless as a child.

UNWISE LANDLORDS ONCE BABIES

(Bowmanville Statesman)

The innate selfishness of humans is nowhere exemplified with such clarity as in the current housing situation.

Searcely a day passes without the story of young parents with babies being refused accommodation simply because they have had the courage to accept the responsibility of parent-hood. One can imagine that it is inconvenient to rent quarters to couples with children. The repair bill may be slightly higher, and unfortunately, babies still must cry.

However, it must be pointed out that few refused to rent accommodation for these reasons, when tenants were difficult to obtain and these times may come again. Landlords are privileged persons who can ill-afford to administer their private industry unwisely. It is by such antics as these that state ownership of every resource gains its adherents, and even landlords must have been babies once.

A FARMER'S SON

Should a farmer's son be expected to farm, more than a coal miner's son to mine coal or a doctor's son to attend the sick? We think not. Many of us who scorn the old world's class system, in which green grocer's sons remained greengrocers and titles were hereditary, support a new class system in which farmer's sons are re-buked for leaving the farm and pay envelopes are hereditary. Young people everywhere should be given the taxes that state ownership of every resource gains its adherents, and even landlords must have been babies once.

In the first of these, 12-year-old Myra Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Ferguson, of Coe Hill, who was visiting her grandparents, was killed.

Struggling across the fields to the rescue, neighbors found the five occupants of that home hanging in the trees. Screaming in terror, they clung to the branches for dear life as the dying tornado whipped about them.

Some were bleeding and naked. The wind had stripped them of their clothing as quickly as it had felled their home. Strewn far across the fields were just a few remnants of it, planks and boards. There was scarcely a trace of their furniture.

In this household, as well as the dead girl, were Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Neal, their grandparents; her brother, Vernon, age 10, and Elmer Neal, an uncle, 30. They were taken to Bancroft Hospital.

Homeless, too, is the Campbell family, who lived nearby. In hospital are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell, their five children; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Campbell and their two children, and Gerald Campbell.

The third home, occupied by a Marshall family, was next hit. Injuries in this case were not as severe.

Leaving desolation and the scars of desolation throughout the quiet countryside, the tornado also played fantastic pranks, uprooting trees and telephone poles and planting them firmly upside down in the earth.

Near Coe Hill it lifted a service station off its foundation, drew out a car inside it and parked it on top of the structure with sufficient force to crush the roof.

Each building it struck was not blown directly down but spun in the air and then scattered to the winds.

Some of the injured found themselves cast in tree tops 100 yards in the opposite direction from which the blast broke.

The tornado hit the village of Gooderham, 34 miles west of Bancroft, first. A mixed train, on the CNR line between Lindsay and Bancroft, had just stopped at the station. As the train crew ran for shelter, the wind tore off the upper section of the station, set it down with a loud crash over the standing train, and also rolled five boxcars off the track.

The twister levelled an area of standing timber at Paudash in Hastings County, slapping down huge trees "like match sticks". No buildings were in that area.

An official of the Bancroft Red Cross Hospital said it was impossible to recognize the victims as they walked and were carried in. He said they were caked with mud and dirt, and their clothing ripped.

Reeve Clarry Rollins, of Wollaston Township, organized a party of men to get the injured to hospital. They had to clean roads of fallen trees, but got cars in to rush the people out.

Dr. S. R. Beatty, of Madoc, was one of the first in and rendered first aid on the spot.

Traffic in the area was tied up. Extra police were rushed from Belleville, Madoc and from here to control the chaos.

Prov. Cons. John Hatch, of Madoc, placed a call for relief to the Toronto Red Cross shortly after the tornado struck.

IT MAKES SENSE

In midsummer we took my four-year-old niece with us to the movies. Our summer heat is such that not even an air-cooling system reaches all parts of the theatre. Diana squirmed and wriggled. During the intermission I asked her what was the matter. She said: "I'm hot. I wish I had a sweater on."

"Why on earth a sweater?" I was surprised into asking.

"So I could take it off," she answered.—Magazine Digest.

One Killed By Tornado In North Hastings

Roaring with the fury of a rocket bomb, a tornado late Saturday swept over the farm lands of two counties, blowing five persons 100 yards from a wrecked home into the tops of a clump of cedar tree. It killed one girl instantly, brought possible fatal injuries to another and injured 20 persons.

In its wake lie the wreckage of half-a-dozen homes and a score of barns and buildings.

A late report from the scene points to a second fatality. From the hamlet of Kidd's Corners, in the Coe Hill district, comes word that a search has started for a little girl, as yet unidentified, who has not been seen since the storm.

With a fierce growl that rose to a steady shrill moan, the twister first struck at the village of Gooderham and ripped east and south for 70 miles over the fields and woodlands of Haliburton and Hastings counties with a swath less than a half-mile wide.

But in no place did the devastation or the terror equal that in the Coe Hill district. Eight miles from the hamlet it bore down upon three farm homes, wrecking all in 90 seconds.

In the first of these, 12-year-old Myra Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Ferguson, of Coe Hill, who was visiting her grandparents, was killed.

Struggling across the fields to the rescue, neighbors found the five occupants of that home hanging in the trees. Screaming in terror, they clung to the branches for dear life as the dying tornado whipped about them.

"Stop Accidents In The Home" Paper At St. Andrews Ladies Aid

(continued from page one) sons on the floor take us to one of the rules of safety we have already mentioned—be tidy. It is always a good plan to have a broom and dustpan in a closet on the second floor to take care of emergency tidying-up jobs.

In bathrooms, soap or water on the floor, and soap and water in the bathtub, often cause falls. Take care of such perils by using washable bathroom rugs and a rubber mat for the tub. Improper installation of electrical fixtures in the bathroom may lead to sudden death. Touching the light chain or switch while standing on a wet floor or in the tub or while touching one of the plumbing fixtures is almost sure to be fatal if the electrical connections are faulty. If you have any doubt about the condition of the electricity in your bathroom, have it gone over by a competent electrician.

Most medicine cabinets should have a large sign on the door reading—Poison. Too many people wander to the medicine cabinet, and get the wrong bottle. It is a good idea to put several rubber bands around all bottles containing poison so that if you pick them up in the dark your sense of touch will reveal the character of the contents. Another additional precaution is to put pins in corks of bottles containing poison.

Examine the attic stairs—they are often steep and treacherous. Be sure the lighting on these stairs is adequate and there is a firm handrail. If the top is dark and dangerous, put on a door and keep it locked so that children will not use the stairs. If the top of the main stairs is placed where children are likely to play, place a gate here. If there is a carpet on either set of stairs, be sure it is firmly attached, and watch for dark spots where toys can lurk to trip the unwary.

In the livingroom, slippery floors are also dangerous. Open fire-places should be guarded by screens. Radio installations should be made only by competent workmen, and equipped with lightning arresters. The outside wires should be kept away from all other wiring.

Water, moist food or grease on linoleum kitchen floors, make very treacherous footing. There is a double danger in slipping in the kitchen, the injury from a fall and the threat of scalding from hot liquids which one may be carrying. The kitchen range is another possible hazard. The pipes should always be in good sound condition and safely distant from wood, paper or curtain material. The flues should be kept clean as dirty flues make insufficient draft, which leads to incomplete combustion. This latter may mean carbon-monoxide poisoning which is nearly always fatal.

All kinds of mechanical equipment especially when driven by electricity, such as washing machines, wringers and kitchen arrangements should be operated with care—they can be a real peril to fingers and arms.

Are the stairs to the cellar in good shape? They should be checked carefully. Are the furnace pipes clean and in good repair and the chimney clean and sound? If there is a rabbit pile in the cellar get rid of it. Rubbish in poorly ventilated places may ignite spontaneously; so may oily rags carelessly thrown in closets.

Now look at the porches. Be sure the timbers are sound, the rails strong and firm, the steps wide and in good repair. Ice, snow and fallen leaves on walks and steps may cause one to fall.

Warn everyone not to run motor in the garage with the door closed. It spells almost certain death. Rusty metal, or boards with nails in them, should not be left where children play.

Finally, never kindle a fire with kerosene or gasoline; never use gasoline for cleaning in the house; never put pins or tacks in the mouth; never allow a loaded gun in the house or barn; never try to stop bleeding with a spider's web, use an antiseptic; never use a ladder unless you know it is safe; never try to stand on a rocking chair or the back of an ordinary chair to put up the curtains; always paint the edge of the top step white; always turn the skillets handle away from the front of the stove so children cannot reach it; always keep the garbage can covered from flies and dogs; always extinguish the fire of matches before casting aside; always put broken glass in a safe place; always turn out the fire before filling gasoline or kerosene stoves; always remove dangerous icicles from roofs; always see that the children learn to swim, and when they do, see that they are careful when swimming beyond their depth; always keep a first aid kit handy to give assistance when minor accidents occur.

Mrs. L. Rodgers then outlined the work of the Junior Institute girls—passing papers and pamphlets, books and posters prepared by the girls on the following subjects: "The Cereal Shelf," "Well-dressed and Well-groomed," "The Care of Garden Fruits and Trees," "The Garden Club." The Fall project is "Cottons May Be Smart."

The meeting closed with the National Anthem and the mizpah benediction.

Following a delicious lunch, Mrs. R. Hermonstall moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Rodgers and the committee for the use of her home, very interesting program and tasty lunch. Mrs. Hiram Rodgers expressed thanks to Mrs. Rodgers for inviting Mrs. Cook and her to join with the ladies of St. Andrew's for the afternoon.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA

In goes our 1,250,000th TELEPHONE

SOMEWHERE in Ontario or Quebec this week an installer is putting in the telephone which will bring our total to a million and a quarter.

In the past ten years we have added more than 500,000 telephones. As the use of the telephone has grown, quality of service has gone up. More people are getting more and better service than ever before.

We will continue to press at top speed our task of providing more and better telephone service as fast as materials become available.

NEWS FOR THE BUSY FARMER

PLANT FOR FALL COLOUR

Canada, particularly the Eastern section, is one of the few countries in the world where nature creates a blaze of colour as a farewell to the growing season. If Canadian gardens are to be typical of the country there should be plantings of trees and shrubs which will produce in the fall the brilliant picture that is so typical of Canadian landscape paintings, says R. W. Oliver of the Horticultural Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

The gold and scarlet of the hard or sugar maple in the fall is familiar. It is so much more attractive in late September and October than the Norway maple, which turns yellow, or the silver maple, the leaves of which simply turn dull and fall off. The last two are planted because they grow more quickly. Another native, the red maple, superior to these two, will grow very quickly and produce brilliant crimson foliage.

Few of the best known flowering shrubs produce much fall colour. They rise to glory in June, but in autumn are outdone by their less known garden companions. One of the exceptions is the wayfaring tree, which has large flattened domes of small white flowers in June and deep purplish foliage in fall. Dogwoods too have fiery showy heads of white flowers and good crimson and gold foliage. They also have brilliant red bark in winter.

The scarlet fall foliage of dwarf or Japanese barberry is a familiar sight, because it is used so often as a low hedge, but less familiar though equally beautiful is the blaze of the sumac on rocky hillsides, the gold and scarlet of amur maples in the park, or the rosy red foliage of the winged spindle tree.

Fruited shrubs, too, add colour in autumn; mountain ash, European red elderberry, and the highbush cranberry with their cluster of crimson, the brilliant scarlet of barberry and many of the cotoneasters, and the purplish-black of our native elders, viburnums and dogwoods. All contrast well with the white berries of snowberry.

A touch of Autumn colour comes with the familiar rose and orange fruits of bittersweet, a common native vine in Canadian woods. Somewhat similar fruits are borne by the commonly known spindle or strawberry trees, which have inconspicuous flowers but in fall they are well worth having in the larger garden.

EGG PRODUCTION AND FEED COSTS

In considering costs of production of eggs it is usual to estimate the cost of feed as $2 to $3 per 100 pounds. But what do eggs cost per dozen to produce is the information a producer really wants, says B. F. Cheney, Poultreyman, Dominion Experimental Station, Kentville, N.S.

In regard to feed costs per dozen eggs, records compiled during the past five years at Kentville, show that during the five-year period the feed cost per dozen eggs ranged from 10.5 to 35 cents. This variation in cost is due almost entirely to fluctuations in rate of production so that when production falls below 50 per cent, feed costs per dozen eggs is over 18 cents and when production is up to 70 per cent feed cost per dozen is 12 to 14 cents.

There is only one way of counteracting rising feed costs with fixed returns and that is by obtaining higher production. Fifty per cent is no longer a satisfactory rate of lay. Flocks must average 60 per cent or better still, 70 per cent if feed costs per dozen eggs are to be reduced to the point where there is a satisfactory profit.

DID GRAND JOB ON POTATOES TO U.K.

On the completion of the delivery by Canada of 70,000 tons of Canadian potatoes to Britain, the British Minister of Food, Hon. John Strachey, wrote to the High Commissioner for Canada in London giving high praise to all Canadians connected with the operation in a letter under date of July 18, which reads as follows—

"As you know, we bought about 70,000 tons of potatoes from Canada and the last shipment arrived two or three weeks ago.

"I have been looking at the reports of this movement and they make such excellent reading that I feel that I must write and ask you to convey to your Government our great appreciation of what has been done.

"Clearly the greatest care was exercised by the authorities in dressing, packing, transport and stowage, and an operation which we feared might be a difficult one was in fact trouble-free. It really was a grand job and I would like to offer you my gratitude for what your countrymen have done for us. It has been of the greatest value to us."

PRICE OF APPLES TO BE SUPPORTED

Authority has been given by the Dominion Government to the Agricultural Prices Support Board to make an agreement with the Nova Scotia Apple Marketing Board to support the price of apples from the 1947 crop, R. Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, announced on August 23rd before leaving for Geneva to attend the third Conference of the Food and Agriculture organization of the United Nations (FAO).

The reason for this action is that the British Ministry of Food is not in a position this year to buy Canadian apples in the usual way. As more than seventy-five per cent of the commercial apple crop of Nova Scotia is normally sold in Britain, the loss of this market is obviously a serious matter for the apple growers of that province. Fortunately there is a possibility of selling more than the usual quantity of Nova Scotia apples in other provinces and in the United States. It now seems certain, however, that there will be a considerable part, particularly of varieties which normally are used mainly in Britain, which cannot be readily marketed elsewhere.

While all of the details of the agreement have not been worked out, the main features are now announced as follows:

- (1) The agreement will provide for the continuance of the Nova Scotia Apple Marketing Board as the sole marketing agency for the 1947 apple crop produced in the Annapolis Valley.
- (2) The Agricultural Prices Support Board will guarantee a minimum average return for all varieties and grades handled by the Marketing Board of $2.25 per barrel to the grower before packing costs.

(3) The Agricultural Prices Support Board will purchase up to 200,000 barrels of varieties and grades which are not readily saleable on this continent and dispose of them outside of the markets available to the Apple Marketing Board.

It is expected that the details of the agreement will be completed within a few days and that provision will be made to limit the proportion of lower grades which may be included under the guarantee, and also specify the quantities and varieties to be bought outright by the Agricultural Prices Support Board.

U.S. SHORN WOOL

The quantity of wool shorn and to be shorn in the United States in 1947 is estimated at 256,302,000 lbs., the smallest production since 1925. It is 24 million pounds or 8 per cent less than shorn wool production in 1946; and 104 million pounds, or 29 per cent below the 1936-45 average. The reduction in the 1947 production is the result of a decrease in the number of sheep shorn. Average weight per fleece is about the same as in 1946.

FOOD FOR UNITED KINGDOM

Canada supplied 57 per cent of wheat and flour in the United Kingdom during 1946; 38.6 per cent of bacon and ham; 45 per cent of canned salmon; 24.2 per cent of cheese; 16 per cent of apples; 15 per cent of eggs and 11 per cent of evaporated milk.

URGENT NEED OF WORKERS IN FARM SERVICE CAMPS

With the re-opening of the Ontario Schools at the beginning of September an urgent need of additional workers to fill up the Ontario Farm Service Camps for the balance of the harvest season has become an immediate problem, says Alex MacLaren, Director of the Ontario Farm Service Force.

These camps, from which workers go out into the harvest fields in their immediate vicinity, are essential to provide a pool of labour to bring in the crops as they mature, and the next two months will be critical in this respect, especially in the fruit and vegetable areas.

With secondary school students leaving the camps at the beginning of September, there will be an immediate need for young men and young women to replace them. Mr. MacLaren estimates that within the next few weeks, 400 young men and 250 young women will be required, and many of these can be taken into the camps at once. There will be a particularly urgent need of young men to start work in the camps between September 5th and 15th.

Mr. MacLaren throws out the suggestion that possibly a large number of sons and daughters of farmers might be available to go into these farm service camps as soon as their own harvest requirements are ended, and he believes this might be a fruitful source of assistance. Farm young people, with experience in harvesting work, would be a godsend to those short of help, and they can very readily be placed in one of the camps which are now short of workers.

Young men and women from the towns and cities who can spare a month or more of their time to work in the harvest fields have an opportunity of earning good wages while at this work, and of living in the comfortable and healthy atmosphere of the Farm Service Force Camps. Their services were never needed more urgently than at the present time, and volunteers for this work will be welcomed.

Application should be made at once to Alex MacLaren, Ontario Farm Service Force, 9 Richmond Street East, Toronto, or by telephone to Adelaide 9461.

NICOLSON—ELMHIRST NUPTIALS AT CAMPBELLFORD.

Christ Church, Campbellford, was the setting of a lovely wedding on Saturday when Gladys Eleanor, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Elmhirst, became the bride of Donald Jack Nicolson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Nicolson, Frankford.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with gladioli, hydrangea, zinnias and fern.

Rev. W. J. Leaonox officiated and Mrs. Ward Archer, cousin of the bride, was at the organ. During the signing of the register, Mrs. Allan Watson sang "Love's Coronation."

Immediately before the ceremony, a violin solo, "At Dawning," was rendered by Bruce Elmhirst, brother of the bride. The choir then preceded the bridal party up the aisle, singing "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden."

The bride, charming in a gown of white satin, fashioned with net yoke, fitted bodice and long sleeves, ending in points over the hands. It was lace trimmed and had full length circular train. Her long scalloped net veil was caught in a coronet of imported orange blossoms. She carried a muff of Bettertime roses and babies' breath.

Miss Phyllis Elmhirst, sister of the bride, was maid of honour, in a pale blue gown. The bodice was of brocade taffeta, fitted with long pointed waistline, from which fell a double net skirt. Her flowers were a muff of pale pink asters and blue cornflower.

Miss Gena McNeely, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. Her gown was pink, with taffeta fitted bodice and point d'esprit yoke. The full skirt and peplum were of point d'esprit and were taffeta trimmed. She carried a muff of deep pink asters and petal buds of asters. Each wore mittens, and calots of Swiss braid with fan-shaped veils and bows, matching their gowns.

Mr. Harold Gilmour, of Frankford, was groomsman. Bruce Elmhirst and Glenn Brown, of Trenton, ushered.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mrs. Elmhirst received wearing a dress of turquoise crepe with black accessories and mink scarf. Her corsage was of Bettertime roses.

Mrs. Nicolson also received, wearing black crepe, with lace trim, black accessories, and corsage of Talieman roses.

For a wedding trip to New York City and Washington, the bride donned a navy suit, with navy accessories. She wore mink furs to complete her costume. They will live in Frankford.

GRAY—WANNAMAKER

At seven o'clock on the evening of Friday, August 1st, a quiet but pretty wedding took place in the Tabernacle Parsonage, Belleville, when Rev. H. O. Eastman united Laura Helen Wannamaker, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wannamaker, of Madoc Junction with Arnold William Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Gray, of Vancouver, B.C.

The bride looked winsome in a street length gown of white silk jersey long lace gloves, and off the face leg-horn hat with side streamers. She was attended by a close friend, Aileen Wright, who was suitably attired, while Wm. Gee performed the duties of groomsman.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gee, North Front Street, Belleville, to fifty guests. Mrs. Gee receiving in pale green crepe with an orchid corsage, while Mrs. Wannamaker received in brown crepe with yellow corsage. The newlyweds received many lovely gifts from their many friends in Belleville.

Later in the evening the happy couple left for Syracuse and other points, the bride travelling in a lovely suit of green. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

A miscellaneous shower was held at the bride's childhood home at Madoc Junction on Friday, August 16th, with over sixty friends and neighbours present. Many lovely gifts were given to the bride and groom, consisting of a tri-light lamp, electric iron, toaster and many other useful articles.

On behalf of his bride and himself the groom graciously thanked all those present. After a short program a delicious lunch was served.

It is no secret in well-informed quarters here that Canada may have to increase her aid to Britain before the year is ended. Third, revenues are generally higher than expenditures in the early months of the fiscal year. All in all, the $388,305,799 surplus should be accepted with caution and not cause too much excitement about possible effects.

PROTECTING THE PEOPLE

One of the most energetic of the government bodies in this capital is the new Standards Division of the Department of Trade and Commerce which is endeavoring to protect the people by establishing basic standards for commodities so that honest merchants as well as consumers may be assured of a square deal. Of course, the newly organized body is moving slowly in this delicate and difficult assignment but it is already gaining a good reputation in a wide variety of fields, including textiles, household appliances, etc.

TOO HOT

While there is much sympathy with the civil servants in Ottawa where the heat is excessive during the summer and they must work under these conditions, yet the quite common practice of government offices closing rather suddenly and without notice on this ground after working only a half day to 12 or 1 o'clock is beginning to annoy many people who have to transact business with these offices. After all, it is argued, private enterprise employees cannot be suffering more from the same heat than the government workers who number about 30,000 here, but these continue to carry on the work whereas government employees leave work at about noon, most of them being seen later either in shows or engaged in shopping in downtown Ottawa.

THERE'S THAT CAR

It is no secret any longer that some sort of black market in used cars or rather so-called used cars since new cars are driven around the block and sold as such at fantastic prices by some people. Now, an official report here has shown that factory shipments of made-in-Canada motor vehicles in the first five months of 1947 have involved 45,419 passenger cars for sale in Canada and 18,903 for export, totalling 64,322 cars. Likewise, in this same period 25,439 commercial vehicles, including trucks, were involved in such shipments for sale in Canada and 15,009 for export, with the total number of such trucks being 40,448. In addition, 12,983 passenger cars and 3,728 trucks were recorded as shipments of vehicles imported from the United States in that same period of five months, offering a pretty good idea how many cars were exported and how many reached the open Canadian market.

SIXTY PLUS

The human side of Ottawa can be seen in the efforts being made now by officials concerned with employment to get work for men of sixty years of age and over, with indications that considerable success has already been achieved and the reasons for this success is a compliment to these older men. It seems that officials have found that these men are willing to work nights or evenings and to accept jobs where there is no pension, no assurance about a future, etc., in sharp contrast to younger men who want easier, shorter hours and other inducements. In every way, the results of the efforts to get them jobs, it is whispered in Ottawa, has shown some mighty strong signs of good character on the part of this so-called "older generation" who have to earn their livelihood, though advanced in years.

INVESTIGATE COMPLAINTS

It is learned in Ottawa that the authorities would investigate the complaints in a petition reportedly signed by 700 convicts in a Canadian penitentiary against the inadequate food served to the prisoners, with this arising out of the escape of three long-term prisoners from a penitentiary, one of whom it is said had mailed this petition. However, it may be added that it is known here that inadequate food complaints are quite the common excuse when there is a prison break or disturbance.

BABY'S BOTTLES

Inquiries by the newly re-organized standards division of the Department of Trade and Commerce in this capital have revealed that some manufacturers have not been as careful as they should have been in calling an ounce an ounce in the making of the baby's bottle so that when infants are placed on a very careful diet as to quantity of milk, they may be short of their needs. It may mean the difference between proper nourishment and undernourishment for the infants, with this having been drawn to the attention of the authorities here.

DELICATE DIPLOMACY

It is no secret that many Canadians outside of this capital have been puzzled by the lack of news of the operations of the Newfoundland delegation which has been in Ottawa for weeks dealing with top officials of the Canadian Government, including members of the cabinet, about the possible means whereby Newfoundland could become the 10th province, with numerous inquiries for such information indicating that somehow an air of mystery has surrounded the proceedings. However, it can be reported that no one in authority here is surprised at the developments.

It is quite true that the arrival of the delegation some weeks ago was accompanied by a loud proclamation and much publicity, with this being followed suddenly by almost total blackout on news. Nevertheless, it must be explained that this was only a fact-finding delegation and nothing else, though this was not, perhaps, emphasized sufficiently. Then again, it must be explained that the whole thing involved far more delicate diplomatic discussions than appeared on the surface to the man-in-the-street across Canada. Finally, the discussions have been "in camera" in regard to the terms of such a union.

Naturally, veteran observers emphasize, such activities in Ottawa always produce an air of mystery, though in reality there may be no real cause for it, and the discussions have taken place in proper unpublicized ways as required in such delicate diplomatic affairs.

SAY IN THE CAPITAL

"They are protected by the Canadian labor laws and their employment conditions are guarded just the same as those of other workers," said Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Reconstruction and Supply, in referring to the charge that Canada and other countries were recruiting "cheap labor" in displaced persons camps of Europe.

"Canada's rehabilitation program was undoubtedly the most comprehensive to be found anywhere in the world," declared Veterans' Affairs Minister Ian Mackenzie.

"Is it any wonder I like Canada, any wonder I like Canadians?" asked John H. Chow, Liaison Officer with the Chinese Commissioner on Overseas Affairs, during a visit in this capital where he thanked Canadians for their aid to China during the war years.

"Free men and women improve the standard of their production and gain new ideas for their own advantage and for the advantage of the community in which they live through such fairs as this," commented Premier George Drew of Ontario at the Central Canada Exhibition in Ottawa.

"The Civil Service Commission is going to do everything it can to find fairs for the older men," remarked Charles Eland, chairman of the Civil Service Commission of Canada in discussing the problem of the sixty plus men who needs work today.

"If you refuse to buy it at such a price you will force industry to bring down the price," was the advice of Drummond Wren, general secretary, Workers Educational Association, during an address in this capital against rising prices in Canada.

"There is room and employment available in Canada for large numbers of British-born immigrants," Hon. G. Dunbar declared in this capital.

WEEKLY WINDUP

The re-opening of the annual fair in Ottawa for the first time since the war has been interpreted here as an indication of a return to normalcy after the war years.

The extremely strict laws of the United States in regard to giving out information on atomic energy which has interfered with the appointment of Dr. Robert J. Moore, Chicago nuclear physicist, as professor of physics at a Canadian University, has been a cause for much comment along Parliament Hill where it is indicated that Canada has no such stiff regulations against professors.

It is emphasized here that the British Commonwealth Conference at Canberra on the Japanese peace terms was not intended to formulate a common policy for the whole Commonwealth in this respect but rather to merely discuss the terms in a non-committal manner.

A story circulating on Parliament Hill claims that the 7½ per cent unofficial discount on Canadian dollars in United States may not continue much longer.

Complaints are reaching the capital that bicycle tubes are most difficult to get at the present time, though bicycle tires appear to be plentiful now.

The disclosure that there will be established a new industry in the Gatineau region nearby Ottawa involving a cost of between $2 and $2.5 millions and employing a large number of men has aroused much curious discussions in the capital.

The "Callow wheelchair coach," a specially built bus equipped to accommodate wheelchair veterans, has been shown in Ottawa, where it is indicated that this bus was invented by Walter Callow, a blind and totally paralyzed patient at Camp Hill Hospital, Halifax, with the display of this wheelchair coach bringing favourable comment as a most ingenious vehicle which should benefit invalids.

PEPPERMINT OIL CROP BECOMING IMPORTANT

Peppermint as a farm crop has begun to expand in Ontario and considerable of the "black muck lands" in the vicinity of Thedford is being used for this crop. Peppermint is used for medicinal purposes and for flavoring in a great many lines, and the demand is increasing. One Toronto drug manufacturing concern used 200 to 400 pounds per year at $15 a pound and hundreds of manufacturers scattered over the Dominion use as large quantities.

The wholesale price of oil of peppermint is $15 a pound of sixteen ounces and the dried herb from which this extract is worth 85 cents a pound. Peppermint bought in this form for manufacture here is duty free while the oil is subject to duty imports.

The peppermint growing industry was started previous to the last war when 50 to 60 acres was grown by those who could see "something in it." There are now about 300 acres devoted to peppermint crops in Ontario.

The average production of green peppermint is from one to two tons per acre. Last spring peppermint growers increased, and in answer to questions about values growers say "it is a fluctuating business, but it is better than growing celery."

The crop is propagated by means of root stalks or stolins. The crop must be kept free of weeds. The crop is the leaves harvested when the oil globules are found on the top and underside of the leaves. The crop is cut like hay and allowed to wilt slightly. It is then gathered and taken to the still and the oil distilled out of the plant.

The still consists of a large container, or metal tank, in which the peppermint hay is placed and the cover placed on. Steam is turned into the tank. The oil is drawn off and the hay removed for refilling. The emptying of the tank is handled by a derrick.

REMOVES RESTRICTIONS ON HOG SLAUGHTERING

The Canadian Meat Board announced on Friday that domestic hog quotas, which have applied at all packing establishments in which hogs were graded for Dominion Government premiums, have been abolished, effective September 1st.

This means there are no further restrictions on the slaughter of hogs or on the distribution of pork for Canadian consumption, indicating possibly larger pork supplies at home.

The board made the announcement in advising that the price schedule on all grades and qualities of Wiltshire sides would be increased by $2 a 100 pounds, effective on product from hogs slaughtered on and after Sept. 1, in line with an Anglo-Canadian agreement announced last Spring.

The agreement had provided for a $4 increase in the price to be paid by the British Food Ministry for Canadian bacon, with half of the increase to become effective last January and half September 1st.

The latest increase boosts the price of Grade "A" Wiltshires to $29, which will remain effective until the end of 1948.

WHITE ROCK TRAIL

By J. Allan Dunn

CHAPTER V

SYNOPSIS—Will MacLeod and his sister Marion had fled their uncle's trading post at Bison Crossing when Bill had been unjustly accused of murder. Dick Byrne, Bill's friend, was sent by Alexander MacLeod to White Rock to deliver a message to Nipecosis, who still practised withcraft. Marion and Bill were hiding in a cottage near Nipecosis'. Before Dick reached White Rock he was shot by a half-breed Kinocet, who wanted to get the award for Bill's capture. Marion made a daily visit to Nipecosis, taking him broth and other food.

Marion had a certain womanly pity toward the wizard and, perhaps because of a Highland inheritance, of ancestors who firmly believed in second-sight, she had a strong belief, blended with reverence, in his wisdom. She sometimes saw his eyes regarding her with a kindly speculation. Nipecosis might know what Will wanted—what she also wanted, for Will's sake first and then for her own, so that they might both leave this exile—but she fancied, and hoped, that the wizard sensed that she would have performed these little offices for him without any selfish purpose.

The primitive lamps cast weird and uncertain shadows about the big room. Nipecosis sat huddled in his blankets.

"Come in, Tagami," he said as she entered. That was his name for her. Tagami, the Birch, most graceful of trees in the North. It was a compliment. He had not moved. He would be expecting her at that hour, the first of twilight and darkness, the opening of the door had brought in cold air, made the wicks flicker; but to Marion there was always something uncanny about the utterances of Nipecosis. His voice sounded like that of an ancient oracle, sired of Delphic utterances, speaking deeply but weakly out of a cavern.

She closed the door and sat down on a stump covered with bison hide, stripped of hair and softly tanned. She took the cover off the broth and offered it to him together with the spoon of carved horn he had given her, telling her it was a magic spoon—one that made good medicine.

The smell of the strong broth gratified him. It was good and proper for Red Deer to bring him the meat. Not proper for him to tell Red Deer that meat, raw or cooked, was too strong for his few teeth and his belly these days. A wizard must always be wrapped in mystery. They would find him some day, in this lodge he had taken over, dead, with dignity. He supped the contents of the basin slowly:

"Your brother hunts," he stated. "He will soon return. He brings meat."

Marion accepted his assertions. Facts would prove them. And she began to have an eerie feeling that she always got in the Conjuror's presence,

It was heightened tonight. She felt the soft, short silken hairs at the back of her neck stiffen and bristle. It seemed as if something marked a clammy track down her spine.

She held the sense of danger and yet she felt she was protected, that Nipecosis was in a kindly mood toward her. Perhaps this last gift of broth might make him speak, tell her what she most wanted to know. She believed in her brother's tale of his innocence in the killing of Jacques Regnier, though she would have followed him anyway. And she knew, as he did, that the evidence was practically overwhelming.

Nipecosis finished his broth; the girl put another chunk in the stove. The shadows blinked about the queer objects and invested them with greater significance.

The Conjuror sat motionless; he had seemed to collapse into a shapeless, boneless heap beneath his blanket. In the wavering light his turtle-head seemed something carved, rather than animate. His eyes were closed between the horny lids.

Suddenly, in some nook where the light did not reach, somewhere in dense shadow, an Indian drum began to beat, a ceremonial tom-tom. It was hard to locate the sound and Marion did not try. Her mouth got dry and again she felt the ghostly trail on her spine. Her skin goose-fleshed. She was sure they were alone in the place, but who was beating that drum in a low, monotonous rhythm that entered into her blood, controlled the throb of heart and pulse? It sounded as if skeleton fingers were tapping on the parchment.

A thin voice was whispering up near the roof. Nipecosis sat huddled, without movement, entranced. Marion listened to the thin voice with the flesh creeping on her bones. The drum might be some trick, the voice ventriloquism, not the voice of the spirit medium of Nipecosis, but it was terribly convincing.

"Love comes on the trail," whispered the tiny voice. "Death is there. Danger comes behind. Death is close to Love and Love travels with Danger. Beyond Elk River by the barrens, on the edge of the forest Death threatens Love and Danger follows fast."

The whisper faded to a wordless chirp. Something seemed fluttering overhead, small but nimble, like a bat. That ceased. The drum tapped on.

Then silence while the fire shifted inside the drum stove and the lamp-light juggled with the shadows. The weird faces on the totem pole seemed alive, peering at her, grinning. She felt the presences that were invisible. "Love on the trail. Death—and Danger, following fast!"

What did the cryptic words mean? Nipecosis would profess he had not heard them, did not utter them. Perhaps he had not.

The Conjuror stirred, came back to life.

"The pan of iron, child," he said hoarsely, but in his own voice. "Bring it swiftly. Heat it on the stove. Then bring me the bowl of herbs, there by the bison skull."

She obeyed, placing the heavy skull on top the hot stove that was fairly humming with heat, showing a dull cherry on its sides. The heat in the room was, or seemed to be, tremendous. Perspiration dripped from her forehead, but Nipecosis shivered, as he did, that the evidence was practically overwhelming.

At his bidding she set down the hot skull on the floor upon two billets of wood. The Conjuror hent over, stiffly, until she fancied he must crack, picking out twigs and dried leaves from the bowl of highly polished wood, tossing them on the metal where they curled and gave out pungent odors, intertwining coils of smoke. The room seemed to swim before her eyes. She seemed curiously light, without body. The walls of the log house faded and she fancied she floated through them, high in air, beneath bright stars, going fast. She heard the deep drone of the Conjuror's voice, and could not understand what he said. He seemed to guide her.

There was a river, its current turned to ice, black under the stars, reflecting them. A black strip of forest over which she floated. Then a waste, blue-white, stretching far south. A star on the ground, on the edge of the forest, red, fitful. It was not a star, but a dying fire.

She seemed impelled toward it, moving without volition, without any sense of corporeal being, hovering. Only her mind, like a bird, like a spirit descending.

There was a man by the fire, muffled up, crouching, shivering. He set a stick carefully on the fire. There were three other sticks on the snow beside him. She tried to see his face but could not. She felt that a message trembled between them, trying to adjust itself to the right vibrations, to conquer some ghostly statis; to tune in.

She felt a tremendous sympathy for this shivering unknown. She felt she knew him, that his presence there was important, vital to her happiness. She knew that he was hurt, helpless, that Death was close by. Her sight blurred, the scene wavered, distorted, slowly disappeared.

Then she was back in the Conjuror's house, on the hide-covered stump, her eyes streaming with tears, the room in a mist of stinging vapor. Her memory of what she had seen, or imagined, was indelibly etched into her brain. She did not try to reason out the phenomenon or whatever the experience might be termed. The conviction that it was true burned inside of her. It might be magic or some natural telepathy transmitted under stress.

Nipecosis sat there, a feeble old man, in front of the stove between the two lamps, his eyes blinking at the stove, shining like crimson spangles between their slitted lids. He seemed exhausted, as if power had gone out of him. She left him there.

Will was home, as Nipecosis had predicted, flinging meat to the dogs, when she broke in on him.

He listened to her seriously. He had her share of Scotch beliefs. He knew Indians. He knew Nipecosis. "All right, Sis!" he told her. "Nipecosis told you something, or showed you something. He doesn't talk through his war bonnet. He knows. I don't know where he gets his stuff or how he puts it over, but I'll stake anything that somebody is out there, on the edge of timber beyond Elk River. That's ten miles. He'll freeze to death inside of two hours. We'll take a chance on it."

"It's no chance, Will. He's there. It's somebody I know, I'm sure. Trying to tell me something."

"Sure, kid," said her brother. He saw she was not far from being hysterical and she was not that sort of a girl. He brought her out of it with something to do.

"Help me harness the team," he commanded.

Seven dogs, three couples and a leader. A girl on the long narrow sled with the blankets. Seven dogs, full of meat, digging in their paws, making ten miles an hour and better, tugging in their harness. A man behind the sled, running, clinging to the gee-pole, guiding it, urging on the team. The breaths of all of them like puffs of steam, pursuing a fantasy perhaps.

They crossed the frozen river and raced through the trees. It was Marion who first glimpsed the dim glow of the fire, down to embers. The man was in a heap in a little hollow, one arm flung out. He was unconscious, stiffening.

The dogs lay down on command, panting after their run, but fresh, their tongues lolling, ears up as the brother and sister ran toward the fallen man.

"Easy, Sis, he's hurt," said Will. "Frozen blood all over his leg and the blanket. Hit in the head, too. We've got to lift him on the sled and get him back in double time. Heart's still going."

"Will," cried the girl with a sob. "It's Bryne. It's Dick Byrne!"

The Stirling News-Argus

Twenty-four years ago the communications department of the Canadian Pacific Railway, more or less as an experiment, installed a new type of telegraph pole along 31 miles of track of the Algoma district in Northern Ontario. The poles were made from the lowly Jack Pine, long considered the comparatively useless poor relation of the Canadian forest, treated with creosote — the first installation of any consequence in Canada.

In order to provide increased clearances for new automatic block signal wires, 495 of the poles in this section are to be replaced with longer poles this year. But so successful was the "experiment" of 1923 that many of the shorter poles are to be used elsewhere on the system, and not a single pole has had to be replaced since that time due to rotting.

In the top picture some of the poles can be seen, still as good as new, along a stretch of the main line just west of Ramsey, Ont., with a standing jack pine snow break, effective and economical, on the right hand side of the track. At lower left Canadian Pacific officials test two of the poles to discover the penetration of creosote as forestry experts look on, and the outer rings on the pole sections in the third picture show the 100% penetration of the creosote.

Ratepayer Writes To Editor Regarding Cutting of Weeds

Mr. Editor:

Can you or anyone tell me what a weed inspector is for? If it is to see that the weeds are growing well, they certainly are. I'm sure no other village can produce such an abundant crop, which is not only a disgrace but a menace to gardens and lawns, not saying anything about the suffering of hay fever patients.

I know some people are not able to cut them, and some can't get anyone, so if the council would appoint a man with a team and mower and go and cut the weeds in every garden before they went to seed, keep an account of the time, and put it on their tax bill, most people would be glad to know it would be done. This would make a great improvement in the looks of the village as well as helping the ones that try to keep their gardens free of weeds.

Last Sunday it told on the radio that there were visitors here from the States, Quebec and several other places, so I'm wondering what their impressions would be. Hoping there will be some immediate action.

Splendid Programme Is Arranged For Stirling Fair On September 19th

Large Entry List Assured In Various Classes—Mayor Follwell To Open The Fair

With the annual Fall Fair sponsored by the Stirling Agricultural Society scheduled for Thursday and Friday, September 18 and 19th, the committee in charge of the various attractions in front of the grandstand have lined up a programme for Friday, September 19th, which should appeal to all, and indications point to its being one of the best ever seen locally.

In preparing the programme, the committee has ever kept in view that the Fair is primarily for the agriculturists of the Community and has endeavoured to make it of particular interest to farmers. However, the urban dwellers have not been overlooked and there are many items that should appeal to them as well. It is the hope of the Society that the citizens of Stirling and Community will show their appreciation of the efforts put forth by the directors by giving their wholehearted support to the Fair, not only with their attendance, but by competing in as many events as possible.

To Open Fair

Mayor Frank Follwell, of Belleville, has consented to officially open the fair and will also act as one of the judges for the Beauty Contest.

Acknowledge Donations

The directors desire to thank the citizens of Stirling and Hastings County who by their generous donations, have assisted them in arranging for the prize lists and entertainment for this year's fair.

Trials of Speed

All of the familiar events are again on the agenda and a good afternoon's entertainment is promised for Friday September 19th. Horse racing enthusiasts will again be able to enjoy their favourite sport as trials of speed — 2.25 class, 2.20 class and a Free-for-all with good purses — are included in the programme. While it is still too early for entries for the races to be made the number of inquiries already received from horsemen would herald the prediction that both classes will be keenly contested.

There will also be the running race, pony race and bicycle races.

Drawing Contest

The drawing contest for teams which attracted so much interest last year will again be held, with three prizes offered, $15.00 $10.00 and $5.00.

Other Features

Other features on this year's programme include ladies, nail driving contest, Tug-of-war, Rawdon vs Sidney, and Winners vs Stirling; Old Tyme Fiddlers' Contest, Baby Show including two classes, 6 months and under, and 7 to 12 months inclusive, slow car driving contest; Singing contest, Mouth Organ contest, Weight guessing contest and foot race.

Beauty Contest

A new feature of the fair will be a beauty contest open to the young ladies of the district, thirty-five dollars is offered in prizes.

Good Midway

Arrangements have been made with the Van Hooten Amusements, Toronto, for a midway with several rides and shows for both the children and the adult patrons of the fair.

Dance At Night

The programme will conclude with a grand dance in the Community Hall Friday night.

In presenting the programme the committee feels it should have the support of the community and given good weather the attendance on Friday should be the best ever.

Move To Belleville

Mr. W. J. Bateman, recently disposed of his farm on 2nd Concession of Rawdon, to Mr. Gordon Richardson, along with Mrs. Bateman moved to Belleville on Thursday last. Prior to their departure they were given a farewell party on Monday evening, September 1st, by their friends and neighbours of the community.

Anniversary Soloist

William Reynolds, baritone soloist, of Stirling, assisted with the special music furnished by the choir at Stephens United Church, at Hoard's Station, on Sunday. Rev. Paul H. Christensen, B.A., of Springbrook, was the special anniversary speaker.

Made False Returns

Charged with making false statements in three income tax returns, Charles E. Scott, a livestock dealer from nearby Thurlow Twp., Thursday was fined a total of $6,000 in Belleville Police Court. Scott pleaded guilty to the three charges previously and sentence was reserved until this time. Evidence was that Scott, in filling his income tax returns, omitted cattle purchases and sales amounting to several hundred thousand dollars.

Springbrook L.O.L. Holds Decoration

The annual church parade of Springbrook LOL #442 was held on Sunday, St. Mark's Bonavaria, being visited for the afternoon service.

Rev. J. M. Browlie officiated, assisted by Past County Master W. J. Gottrell. An impressive sermon was given on the words of St. Paul, when halted on the road to Damascus, "David what wilt Thou have me do?" Following the service the annual decoration service of No. 1 District Centre Hastings Orange Association took place in Mt. Nebo cemetery.

District Master Gordon Webb was in charge of the ceremonies, assisted by Wor. Bro. William Neal. An address on St. Paul's charge to Timothy, "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life," was delivered by Past County Master, W. J. Gottrell, who spoke of the share present day Christians have in the spiritual warfare. Graves of deceased members were decorated following the reading of their names and brethren buried in district cemeteries were also remembered as their names were read also.

He plans to visit the Oak Hills later this Fall when the autumn colors are at their height.

Finalists Play Second Tie Game

Foxboro and Stirling Battle To 9-9 Draw on Saturday — Play Again Tonight At 6

For the second time in the finals of the Centre Hastings Softball League Foxboro and Stirling played a tie game on Saturday night at the local Fair Grounds with the final score being 9-9. The largest crowd of the season witnessed the game, which ended in a lengthy argument between the opposing clubs over the work of the scorers. The teams will again try to settle the championship tonight at the Fair Grounds with neutral officials in charge.

Foxboro went to bat first and greeted Rodgers, on the pitching mound for Stirling, with a barrage of base hits, including a double and four singles, for a total of three runs. They added another in the second on a walk and two hits but did the most damage in the third when they batted completely around and scored five runs to bring their total to nine. Stewart contributed a triple and McCaughen a double which with three singles and a walk accounted for all the runs. However, from then on they went down in order, with only thirteen men facing Rodgers in the last four innings.

Stirling came one run in the first and had their big inning in the second, when a double by "Mickey" Armstrong, a triple by Dafoe and four singles resulted in four runs. They added one in the third on a single by Burton Morton and a triple by Fraser. One more was added in the six, and they rallied in the last inning to push the tying runs across the plate when singles by Fraser and Armstrong were followed by a timely double by Ketcheson to count two runs. Ketcheson's double came with two men out.

Bastedo, with four hits in four tries, led the Stirling offensive, as well as pulling off some fine catches in left field, and was closely followed by Armstrong with a pair of doubles and a single. Fraser had a triple and Ketcheson a double. Burton Morton was also prominent in the field.

Stewart, with a triple, and Sine and McCaughen, with doubles, were the heavy hitters for Foxboro.

The Line-Ups

FOXBORO—Sine, rf; Stewart, 3b; Priest, 2b; T. Tummon, p; McCaughen, 1b; Churchill, c; Ketcheson, ss; Gay, cf; F. Tummon, lf.

Campaign For Blind Commences In Stirling On September 22nd

The annual campaign of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Stirling starts on September 22nd, announced Mrs. F. Houchin, member for Stirling of the Institute's Hastings County Advisory Board.

The Institute makes only one appeal each year in Stirling. A generous response from the public is vitally necessary if the Institute is to maintain its standards of service to the blind people in this district. It was explained that the object of this service is to train the blind to use their remaining four senses to the best advantage for their own comfort, happiness, and independence.

Nearly 1,500 blind people in Canada last year were placed in jobs of various types by the Institute. About the same number made use of the Library, of over 24,000 braille and talking books, which are sent free of charge all over Canada. Over 1,000 who have recently lost sight received the services of C.N.I.B. home teachers.

Through the work of The Canadian National Institute for the Blind, sightless people in Canada to-day are enjoying greater independence, greater activity, and better living conditions than ever before. With the support of the people of Stirling we hope to give even better service in the coming year.

This appeal is being conducted by the Hastings County Board on a county-wide basis. There will be a canvass in Stirling, closing with a tag day on Saturday, September 27th. It is hoped that the same generous support accorded last year will again be forthcoming.

HEAVY DEMAND BY FARMERS OR LOANS

Loans under the Farm Improvement Loans Act totalled 1,025 for the six-month period ended June 30th. The loans were for the construction, alteration and repair of farm buildings in Canada. Seven hundred of these loans were made in Western Canada, 270 in Ontario and 54 in Quebec and the Maritimes.

The Farm Improvement Loans Act is being used extensively for loans for the clearing and breaking of new land and it is estimated that over 100,000 acres of new land will be added to the available acreage for 1948 through these loans.

Up to June 30th, a total of 10,120 farmers obtained loans for all purposes in 1947 compared with 5,490 for the corresponding period of 1946.

BURYING THE BODY

There is no doubt that businessmen and others throughout Canada will be interested to learn that unofficially it is understood in this capital that the Wartime Prices and Trade Board may be subject of an important announcement within a few weeks and this may offer a hint as to the approximate time for the end of most of the operations if this organization still be carried on from headquarters here. It is said that the expectation is that this will indicate what few controls will be allowed to retain until the final wind-up of the organization, with one suggested as likely control being

them, says officials of the Department.

Poultry raisers were urged early this year by Poultry Services, Dominion Department of Agriculture to buy or hatch chicks a month to two months earlier than usually so as to make eggs available in the fall and winter for export to Great Britain. They are now benefiting by the pay-off. Two cars of new crop eggs were offered to the Special Products Board on August 22, for shipment to Great Britain against the British egg contract. This was a full month earlier than in 1946, and the 1947 early-hatched pullets should enable producers to continue egg deliveries throughout the fall and winter, when Britain wants them most and pays a premium for Announcement has been made officially through the British Food Mission, that the agreement with Canada for the sale of eggs and egg products extending to the end of January, 1949, will not be affected by measures being taken by Britain to strengthen her economic position.

A native of Sidney township, Mr. Lake has lived practically all his life on the Lake homestead where he still resides. He is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lake, while his bride of 50 years, is the former Elizabeth Ashley, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Simeon Ashley, West Huntingdon.

It was fifty years ago on September 8th that Mr. Lake, then a young man of 26 years, hitched up the family democrat and drove to the home of his bride-to-be at West Huntingdon, where he was married. Attendants at the wedding 50 years ago were Mr. Charles Ashley, West Huntingdon, brother of the bride, and the present Mrs. Mary Anderson, of Stoney Creek. Both attendants were at the 50th anniversary

Grant To Centre

A former railway employee with the Bridge and Building department, Mr. Lake some years ago gave up this work to return to the family home.

For many years he augmented his farm income as a thresher and each fall was "on the road" in this capacity. He sold his thresher interests some years ago.

Both faithful members of Foxboro Presbyterian Church, Mrs. Lake is active in W.M.S. and Ladies' Guild circles, while Mr. Lake is a member of the Royal Orange Lodge. They have one son, Jack, at home.

In keeping with the golden anniversary, gifts tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Lake were gold tinted and gold in color and included an electric hotplate, a Kenwood blanket, an electric heating pad and a pair of towels. In addition Mrs. Lake was presented with a lovely corsage.

A programme of impromptu speeches, solos, readings and community singing was enjoyed following which refreshments were served. Rev. Mr. MacMillan, Presbyterian minister, acted as chairman for the evening.

Business over, a lunch was served and a social half hour followed.

The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Ken Morrow's on October 6th.

All ladies of the congregation are welcome.

INCREASE PRICE OF EXPORT BACON

On January 2, 1947, the Right Hon. J. G. Gardiner announced that an agreement had been reached with the United Kingdom Ministry of Food for an increase of $4 per hundred in the price to be paid for Canadian bacon with half of this increase or $2 to be effective in January and a further $2 increase on September 1, 1947.

The $2 increase in January raised the price to the United Kingdom from $25 per hundred pounds for Grade A Wiltshire to $27. The increase which went into effect on September 1st advanced the price of Grade A Wiltshire to $29. The price of $29 remains effective until the end of 1948. In accordance with this statement the Meat Board announced that the price schedule for all grades and qualities of Wiltshire Sides would be increased by $2 a hundred, effective on product from hogs slaughtered on and after Monday, September 1st.

The Meat Board further announced that domestic hog quotas, which have applied at all packing establishments in which hogs were graded for Dominion Government premiums, are being abolished as of September 1st, 1947. This, in effect, means there are no further restrictions on the slaughter of hogs or on the distribution of pork for Canadian consumption.

Honored Prior To Departure

Mrs. Donald Fleming, assisted by Mrs. Earl McMaster, Ivanhoe, was hostess to about fifteen young ladies Tuesday evening, September 2nd, in honor of the Misses Beverley Palmer and Shirley Fleming on the eve of their departure for Peterborough Civic Hospital, where they will enroll as student nurses.

A program of Community singing, contests and a piano solo by Miss D. Vandome was followed by the presentation by Mrs. McMaster of two beautiful plastic umbrellas. Both Shirley and Beverley made suitable replies after which dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. McMaster.

After bidding the girls "good luck" and farewell the party dispersed all regretting the fact that "Shirley" and "Beverly" would no longer be among the students of Madoc High.

WHY?

It is quite a long time that the war is over but many a severe pain or sad memory seem to have been revived by the report that two Japanese war criminals, who had been found guilty and sentenced to death for their responsibility in the death of Canadian and British soldiers, had their sentences reduced by British officers. It is known in Ottawa that a wave of resentment, especially amongst veterans, has been sweeping across Canada against this action. It is the same distasteful feeling which followed similar reduction of death sentences of other major war criminals such as the German generals Kesseling and Meyer. There are a great many Canadians who do not like these decisions and they are not concealing their dislike, even if these reductions of death sentences are in accord with the regulations, particularly is this dislike strong among veterans, judging from reports heard on Parliament Hill.

PETITION IN CIRCULATION

The fear that the price of bread will jump up shortly and raise the cost of living in Canada has motivated the circulation of a petition asking the Federal Government to retain the subsidy on hard wheat.

This petition reads, in part, as follows: "Whereas bread is one of the staple items in the diet of Canadian people and its proportionately even more important in the lower income groups, and whereas the continuation of the present price of bread is dependent on the retention of the hard wheat subsidy and the maintenance of price control on bread, therefore we petition the Federal Government to retain this subsidy and control so as to avoid a further lowering of the standard of living of the Canadian people who are already suffering under constantly rising prices."

CABINET REORGANIZATION

Although a new Fisheries Minister has been named in the person of Milton F. Gregg VC, who was president of the University of New Brunswick and who is contesting for the Liberals York-Sunbury in the Oct. 20th by-election, yet it is whispered in this capital that cabinet reorganization is almost a certainty before the next session of the Parliament will get going, with a variety of rumors heard in gossip circles along Parliament Hill at the present time, including the possibility of a shift in posts for some members of the cabinet and the departure of others. In any case, it is said here that such plans are in the making right now and the appointment of a new Fisheries Minister is only one of the moves, with others likely to follow later.

BIG BALLOON?

Since it is officially disclosed here that the cheques cashed in the first seven months of this year were greater than in any other year in Canada's history, this is interpreted as indicating a reflection of a continuation of more advances in this country's economic activities and upward climb of prices.

After all is said and done the total of such cheques cashed in Canada so far in 1947 reached $2,553 million and this, in the language of the man-in-the-street, was greater by no less than 58.5 per cent than in the so-called prosperous days of 1929 and spectacularly higher by 149.4 per cent than the last full pre-war year of 1938.

What does this mean in relation to other factors? And for the man-in-the-street it can be reported that along Parliament Hill the index of cheques cashed is brought into comparison with the cost-of-living which was 8.6 per cent higher in the same period; employment in eight main industrial groups rose from 156.4 in June, 1946, to 169.9 in the same month this year, a gain of 8.6 per cent; a sharp drop in the percentage of unemployed; an increase in industrial production, about 11.6 per cent higher. In brief, all along the line further advances in economic activity and prices are reflected in conditions in Canada at the present time and this is emphasized in the report about cheques cashed in the first seven months of this year.

IMPORTANCE OF UNIFORMITY

The importance of uniformity of legislation in the different provinces was emphasized at the Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity, a committee of the Canadian Bar Association, at a meeting in Ottawa, where a spokesman for the Canadian Government indicated in no uncertain language of the benefits derived from the deliberations and decision of this body both for the Dominion and the provinces. Indeed it is recognized here that many of the recommendations of these Commissioners have been accepted and placed on the statute books. "We all know that disruptive forces are tirelessly at work in Canada to-day," say W. P. O'Meara, K.C., presiding at the Conference. "The rule of law alone, aside from Christian faith, holds those forces in check. These distinguished members of the bar receive no remuneration for their work on this Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity.

MORE HOUSES

It is reported in Ottawa that more houses will be built in Canada this year than ever before, though there is no doubt that the initial objective of 80,000 housing units may not be reached, even if the 70,000 units figure is almost sure to be passed, including 20,000 housing units under government plans and from 50,000 to 55,000 units under private plans. Incidentally, too, building costs are reported to be passing their peak, and, while material costs may be a little higher, efficiency in building and less costly details in securing materials may bring a downward trend by moderate degrees.

SAID IN THE CAPITAL

"The trouble with the British Commonwealth is that Britain is over populated and that the Dominions are underpopulated," said Hon. A. A. Caldwell, Australian Minister of Immigration, during a brief visit to this capital.

"The amount of the increase cannot yet be decided, depending in large part upon the size of the present crop and developments in the market situation between now and the assembling of Parliament but an increase will certainly be recommended," stated Trade and Commerce Minister MacKinnon in discussing wheat prices.

"They are amazed at what we have seen over and hope we can continue," remarked Bryan L. White, editor of the Ottawa Farm Journal, during an address following his return recently from a trip overseas where he attended a farm organization conference.

"I hope the immigration laws regarding Chinese will be widened even more," said Dr. Wu Shang-Ying, Secretary-General of the Legislative Yuan Mission, upon arriving in this capital. "I was amazed to find that people wanted to hear the music of the masters, not the claptrap music which they can hear everyday," commented the world-famous U.S. band leader, Dr. France Goldman, during a speech in Ottawa.

"Any student of world events recognizes that there is a terrific struggle going on to-day between the forces of dictatorship and those of democracy," declared M. J. Caldwell, leader of the CCF Party.

"Women work only because of economic compulsion," stated K. F. Lloyd of the Post Office Department. "If adequate salaries were available to husbands, women would prefer full-time housemaking."

WEEKLY WIND-UP

It is learned in the capital that housewives are showing a terrific demand for DP's as domestic workers ever since it was announced that the Canadian Government will allow such displaced persons to enter Canada, with the National Employment Office here being flooded with such requests.

Three members of a Chinese legislative mission have visited Canada to meet parliamentary officials and to continue their study of democratic institutions and parliamentary processes in Canada.

Meanwhile, one of this country's most outstanding experts on parliamentary procedure, Dr. Arthur Beauchene, has gone to London, Eng., to study ways and means of streamlining our own parliamentary methods in order to speed the business of parliament, with the anticipation that he will prepare a report on same for the Government after visiting Westminster.

There is considerable curiosity here concerning the quick one-day visit to this capital by Premier McNair, of New Brunswick.

A report here insinuates that increased license fees may be coming for Canadian privately-owned radio broadcasting stations, together with a two-year term for such licenses.

NATIONAL IMMUNIZATION WEEK OCTOBER 5-11

Dr. Nelles Silverthorne, chairman of the Health League of Canada's National Immunization Committee, has announced that the Dominion's fifth annual National Immunization Week will be observed during the week of October 5, next.

This annual national observance is designed to draw attention to the fact that certain communicable diseases, which are still taking toll among the nation's children, are largely preventable. National Immunization Week is just another means of emphasizing to the general public something they should know already — that toxoid prevents diphtheria; that whooping cough vaccine prevents whooping cough; and that vaccination prevents smallpox.

The "Week" is sponsored by the Health League in co-operation with departments of health throughout the nation.

ONTARIO TO ELIMINATE HIGHWAY BILLBOARDS

Regulations for elimination of signs along provincial highways appeared in the Ontario Gazette, official publication of the Provincial Government.

The regulations prohibit erection of a sign except under license by the minister of highways and apply not only to regular signs but to signs on fences, buildings, rocks or other surface.

Highways Minister Hon. George Doucett said signs painted on the sides of barns could be prevented under new regulations.

Officials explained that signs were considered a hazard to safe driving through distraction of the auto-driver's attention from the highway. Signs already are prohibited along the Queen Elizabeth Way and the same prohibition will apply to the new Toronto-Barrie and Oshawa highways.

HOG MARKETINGS UP 18% IN JULY

Hog marketings during July of this year rose 18 per cent above those of July, 1946, L. W. Pearsall, Chairman of the Meat Board has announced.

Last July was the third successive month to show greater marketings than in the corresponding months of 1946. June advanced 15 per cent and May, eight per cent.

July's increased marketings were almost entirely due to heavier offerings from Eastern Canada which marked 29.7 per cent more hogs than in July, 1946. Ontario rose by 39.5 per cent and Quebec by 49.1 per cent.

Hog marketings from the three prairie provinces were down 6.7 per cent from those of July, 1946, but are improved from June, 1947, when they were 13.7 per cent less than in June, 1946.

All Canada hog marketings for the first seven months of 1947 total 2,619,110, or five per cent less than the 2,753,109 hogs marketed during the corresponding period of 1946.

PRAYING MANTIS

Farmers working in hay fields report that several specimens of praying mantis have been found.

Making their appearance in the country about 1936 the mantis was introduced from Europe and is believed to have reached Ontario by way of New York State. It is harmless except to other insects, is safe to handle and makes an interesting pet. They are one of our good immigrants since their food is mostly noxious insects. It is said that they are the only insect that can turn its head without turning its body, and it scratches itself like a dog.

WHITE ROCK TRAIL

By J. Allan Dunn

CHAPTER VI

SYNOPSIS—Will MacLeod and his sister Marion had fled their uncle's trading post at Bison Crossing when Bill had been unjustly accused of murder. Dick Byrne, Bill's friend, was sent by Alexander MacLeod to White Rock to deliver a message to Nipegosis, who still practised witheract. Marion and Bill were hiding in a cottage near Nipegosis'. Before Dick reached White Rock he was shot by a half-breed Kinocet, who wanted to get the award for Bill's capture. Marion made a daily visit to Nipegosis, taking him broth and other food. On a visit to Nipegosis Marion learned that some friend was dying on the trail. Bill and Marion set out to find him. They arrived and found Dick with blood all over him and practically frozen to death, lying by the dying fire. They made plans to rush him back to White Rock.

The last of the fire died to gray ash. There was no more fuel. They got him wrapped in blankets on the sled and Will went back to see if anything was left. He saw a packet in the edge of the dead fire. It was wrapped in oil-skin that had frozen hard with the congealed moisture from Byrne's body warmth. Fire had nibbled at it, but there had not been flame enough to eat it.

He took off the wrapping, staring at the superscription. Under the stars, with the reflection from the white snow he could distinguish his uncle's seal, the bold writing of The MacLeod.

"Now what the devil?" he muttered, then thrust it into his mackinaw. Dick Byrne might know what it was all about. The important thing was to get him to the cabin.

The dogs ran with a will. There would be more meat when they got back.

And it was a fine night for swift goss. It was not until they had worked long over Byrne, dressed his less wounded, got the frostbitten banton, that Will remembered the message.

Byrne was moaning from the pain of restoring circulation, but he was still unconscious.

"You'd better take this over to the Conjuror, Sis, he said. "Dick's lost a lot of blood. He may not come to for hours. This may be important, though you'll have to read it for Nipegosis unless the old man has used Indian script. In the meantime, I'll look out for Dick."

"I won't be long," she said.

She was not. She was back inside of ten minutes, saying nothing, holding out the opened communication to her brother who took it with a look of surprise at her face.

To either of you two who open this, the R.C.M.P. know Will is in White Rock. They are coming after him. There is a reward of a thousand dollars... I knew it first and sent this by a sure messenger who knows nothing of its contents. Nor has need to... You can trust Nipegosis. Get away at once,

MacLeod

"He warned you!" cried the girl.

"Like hell he did!" said Will bitterly. "For his own good. For the same reason he didn't interfere with our getaway from Bison Crossing. It's not that he'd mind seeing me doing time, or even go to the gallows, but he'd hate to have a nephew of his do a stretch or swing, because it would hurt the MacLeod reputation and might spoil his business. He wouldn't turn a finger to help me on my own account."

"You're hard, Will. You don't judge him fairly."

"I'll give him this much credit! He's handed out a good tip. I hoped we could stay hidden out till spring when the Indians come in. The man I'm after is almost certain to land in White Rock. I've got a hunch he's not so far off now."

"You mean Peace River Jack?"

"That's the bird," said Will MacLeod grimly. "He's got an Indian name, the mongrel, Kinocet. I want to have a talk with him. He owed Regnier a lot of money and Regnier had shut off his credit. Why wouldn't he have killed Regnier? He'd use a knife. I don't—that way. He beat it out of town, too, though the old man had promised him a good job stringing snowshoes. Why didn't they suspect him?"

"You didn't think of him yourself in the beginning, Will. And it was your knife. It's no good to accuse Kinocet without proof."

"I'll prove it, if I have to shake it out of him. He could have stolen my knife, been slick enough to throw the blame on me. He used to hang around Fawn, too. I was nice to that kid, but she was dead straight if she was a quarter-breed. Regnier was jealous of me for no reason. One thing's pretty sure. If any Indian or breed did it Nipegosis will know, if we could only get him to talk. It doesn't look like there's much chance of him giving away one of his own race, though," he finished despondently.

"You're got to go, Will, at once. We don't know how long Dick may have been on the trail. The Mountie may be here any moment."

She looked fearfully about her as if she dreaded a summons on the door, the entrance of a trooper in "the name of the king."

"I've got to beat it. If they get me in jail it's all off."

"Where'll you go?"

"I'll load up the sled, take along some grub, hit it for Stony River's Caves. There's a hot spring in one of them. I'd have gone there in the first place if you hadn't been sport enough to come along. But..."

He slumped in a chair, the action out of him.

"I can't go, Sis."

"You've got to go. Why not?"

"I can't go and leave you here, alone."

"Dick's here."

"A sick man. Liable to be sick for two or three weeks."

"That's nonsense. I can take care of myself. It's better for some one to be here when that Mountie arrives. I may be able to throw him off the track."

"If you can, you're a wonder. I wonder who tipped them off. I think Nipegosis has Indians seeing him now and them. It's no use figuring. You're sure you'll be all right?"

"Sing. But hurry."

"Sing. That breaks up my chances for seeing Kinocet."

"Will, you've got to go. I will come out all right. They can't hang an innocent man."

He managed a grin.

"Can't they? They do."

He got bury, Marion helping him, loading his sled. The dogs were still eager to go. At last he was ready. He kissed his sister. She was listening, looking, dreading to see a figure materialize out of the night. Will was right. The Mounties were hard to fool. They got their men.

"Listen, Kid, Dick Byrne was stuck on you. How do you feel about it?"

"Will, don't be so reckless. Please go!"

"I'm off, but I don't know if I'm wise in leaving you two without a chaperon!" His voice lost its bantering as he took her in his arms. "You're a good sport, Marion. I hope I'll find a girl like you for myself some day."

He swung his whip, the lash cracked as he leaped to the back of the sled, holding on to the geo-pole, waving an arm in farewell. She watched him until he vanished. Reckless and light-hearted, Will had got himself into other troubles before this last terrible one, but it did not seem possible he could have committed murder. But it was more than possible he might be convicted of that crime.

Back in the house she looked at the unconscious Dick Byrne, tenderly. She was not at all sure she loved him. But she liked him. He had brought through the message. She saw a scrap of folded paper that Will had found when they got his clothes off, and they had forgotten. She read it now:

Money in my belt belongs to Alexander MacLeod. Five hundred dollars.

Richard A. Byrne.

She did not understand it. She got the money belt and put it away. It seemed to back up her feeling that Will judged his uncle too hard. But that did not mend matters.

There was a thousand-dollar reward out for Will. Some one had betrayed them to the Mounted. She must handle the trooper when he came.

She stood there frowning, gazing at Byrne's wan features, framed with a three-day's beard. He stirred a little, murmured something. He was coming back to his senses. She laid a hand on his forehead spoke to him soothingly.

Inspiration came to her. She would go back to Nipegosis, ask him to help her. There was no need to speak of Peace River Jack, or Kinocet, who was called by his Indian name. But—if Nipegosis would give her what she wanted, what she knew he possessed...

She closed the cabin door and ran fast over the slippery, crust to the Conjuror's house.

Well as Dick Byrne had done, fast, as the cunning Kinocet had trailed, O'Rourke of the Mounted had bested them. He was still behind, but he had caught up many miles. He expected to cross the finish line tomorrow. Early. He suspected some man was ahead, sent by MacLeod, though he did not enter Kinocet into his calculations. He had beaten his own records.

It was dawn and he was up and ready. He broke off a tip of hemlock and examined it. It would not lie. Spring was on the way. A chinook wind was threatening. It did not matter, once he got his man.

But there were other elements against which he might not fight as he did against the wild and the frost and the thaw.

He barely remembered Will MacLeod. He had his description with him. He had conducted the preliminary examination on the murder of Jacques Regnier. He was out now, as a sergeant of the R.C.M.P. to land the murderer.

And, there was Marion MacLeod!

Marion MacLeod, in a white gown as he had danced with her at Spruce City, visioned her a thousand times since saw her now in the dull smoke of his failing fire. He dreamed of her, told himself he was foolish. What had a Mountie to do with a sweetheart?

Yes she had gripped his heart—she gripped it now—and he was sworn to take her brother, to deliver him to a stern and unrelenting justice which believed him guilty of murder, according to the explicit evidence.

He sized up the immediate weather and forged on. He did not pass the spot where Dick Byrne had made camp, but slanted on a tangent, humoring the wind but fighting it. He crossed Elk River, saw the abandoned cabin of White Rock. There was smoke coming from the chimneys of two of them. One was that of Nipegosis. It had been described to him.

The other...

Sergeant O'Rourke had an idea that Marion MacLeod had been expecting his intention to continue cadet training in Ontario's Secondary Schools on was no friendly greeting in her eyes. But she expressed no surprise at seeing him. He remembered that, later. (To be continued)

What Others Say!

A LITTLE BUTTER PLEASE

This newspaper has received lately from local farmers a large assortment of oversized vegetables, brought into the office as items of local interest. We eagerly anticipate being able to inform our readers of an oversized pound of butter which has been produced locally at the same price—Brockville Recorder and Times.

CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

Firearms in the hands of children usually indicate criminal negligence on the part of the parents, particularly so when the parent has deliberately left a loaded gun lying around the house or barn.—Cobourg World.

TO TRADE AT HOME?

(Prescott Journal)

Frequently we read editorials in our exchanges that are concerned about the natives preferring to shop out of town. And we wonder if one of the berating the customer, we feel that sometimes it's our merchants who should feel the weight of the editorial pen.

Do they tell their trading public often and concisely enough what they have to offer from their shelves? The greatest commercial empires of our time owe a great part of their continued success to their intensive advertising. A glance at the dailies and the two big mail order catalogues received recently will illustrate to the advertiser how the bigger fellows go about it. The pages give detailed descriptions, tell readers about the articles so that when they come to the price they know whether or not they want to spend their money on it.

Nationally advertised goods sell themselves if the merchant tells his customers he has them. And the most economical and efficient method of telling the public sits almost on the merchant's own doorstep. His hometown newspaper exists for the purpose of service and is welcomed in the homes of the community for it brings news of the people in whom the reader is most concerned—his neighbours.

MAKE LAW STERN

(Brockville Recorder and Times)

We didn't have so much crime when a murderer brought to trial knew that almost certainly he would find his way to the gallows or when armed robbery was usually punishable by long imprisonment at hard labor on the rock pile. For that matter, rape was, we believe, almost non-existent when it was also punishable by death, and even petty crime was less pronounced when we had the pillory and the stocks.

How about putting sternness and severity back into the enforcement of the law, making law-breakers realize that crime does not pay—and never mind the sub-sisters?

If we start to do this and persevere, we may soon see much less of this serious crime which is such a reproach and danger to a part of Canada that is inherently peaceful and law-abiding and certainly out of all patience with its murderers, its rapists and its bank robbers.

He barely remembered Will MacLeod. He had his description with him. He had conducted the preliminary examination on the murder of Jacques Regnier. He was out now, as a sergeant of the R.C.M.P. to land the murderer.

MEMORIAL EDITION OF JACK MINER'S BOOK

All followers of the life of the late

Jack Miner and his career as a bird lover, naturalist, conservationist and humanitarian will be interested to learn that the Jack Miner Foundation have recently persuaded the Reilly

Lee Pub. Co., of Chicago, and the

Clark Corp. of Toronto, to bring out for the public's interest a new enlarged Memorial Edition of the book entitled "Jack Miner And The Birds".

They have combined his two books

entitled "Jack Miner And The Birds"

and "Jack Miner On Current Topics" with twenty of Jack Miner's most famous magazine and newspaper articles sandwiched in between, making it a very large edition of several hundred pages. It is quite appropriate that it be called the memorial edition.

Orders have flooded the publishers' offices before the book was actually off the press, which is only evidence of how popular Jack Miner's writings and life work was as he lived among his fellowmen of his generation.

The late Jack Miner was not considered a sceptical naturalist from a sceptical standpoint. Jack Miner said himself "he was not interested so much in the number of spots on a woodpecker's tail as he was in saving that and other species from extermination."

The late Governor Alfred Smith of the State of New York always introduced Jack Miner as the "Billy Sunday for the bird family."

The late S. Cobb always referred to Jack Miner

as "the greatest practical naturalist on the planet," while Edgar A. Guest the Detroit poet, always spoke of him as the best loved Christian in America. Thousands of such tributes have been made about the world famous naturalist both while he was living and since he passed on. His own personal writings now contained in the new enlarged memorial edition of

Jack Miner and the Birds tells why he gained the respect and honour of the men and women of not only this continent but the entire world.

"Some day the stones that are thrown at you will be gathered up and made into a monument to your insight and foresight." — E. Stanley Jones.

Presentation Made Mr. and Mrs. H. Burns

At a joint dance of the Sidney Jubilee Farmers and the Sidney Softball League on Thursday evening, September 11th, two events of interest took place. The first was the presentation of the cup by Mr. Burns to the Wallbridge team who were the winners of the Sidney Softball League. The second, which was possibly of more interest to all Juniors in Hastings County, was the presentation of a silver tray by Mr. Dave Fargey, President of the Hastings County Junior Farmers' Association, on behalf of all the Hastings Juniors to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burns. Mr. Fargey expressed the sentiments of all the Juniors when he stated that they regretted having Mr. Burns leave the County but at the same time wished both he and Mrs. Burns every success and happiness in their new work.

The remainder of the evening was enjoyed by all in modern and old-time dancing.

EDNA JAQUES RECITAL ENJOYED

A large and appreciative audience gathered in St. Paul's Church, on Tuesday evening to hear the Edna Jaques recital and concert sponsored by the Woman's Association.

Mr. Fenn and Mr. Carroll were accompanied at the piano by Alex Gordon, of Belleville, who also played two piano solos including a waltz of his own composition.

Rev. R. W. Barker then introduced Mrs. Jamieson (Edna Jaques), who recited a number of her poems. Admit Statement of Rawdon Farmer In Murder Attempt Trial Now On BELLEVILLE, Sept. 17th. — Trial of Frederick E. Martin, of Rawdon Township, on charges of arson and attempted murder, is continuing, following reading of a statement of the accused man in court at Belleville on Tuesday.

The charges claim Martin set fire to his farm home while three persons were sleeping in the house. All were rescued by neighbors before the fire spread.

Hearing of the charges came to an abrupt halt Tuesday afternoon when Justice Wilson advised counsel to prepare further argument as to the admissibility as evidence of the accused's statement to the police.

Seven witnesses were called by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan during Tuesday's proceedings which were brought to an abrupt halt when Defense Counsel R. D. Arnott raised the question of the admissibility of Martin's statement.

Provincial Constable J. Ernest Keays had just been sworn when Mr. Arnott asked that the jury be retired. Martin had then further questioned as to the penalty if a person knew all about a fire and went into court and said he knew nothing about it. The constable had told Martin that this also would be a serious matter.

Vincent McQuaid, police officer at Kingston, stated that on May 1st, Martin had walked into the police station at Kingston and gave himself up stating that he had burned his home in Rawdon Township.

Admission To Constable

"The man appeared very upset about something and I did not want to hear his story as it was out of our jurisdiction," he said. Continuing, Constable McQuaid stated, Martin told him that on the night of May 6th he had taken his wife to Stirling to attend a meeting. At 10 o'clock he had returned to his farm home and had started the fire in the attic and then went back to Stirling for Mrs. Martin.

He stated that with Ray and Allen Sine he had been returning home from Stirling at 11:30 when, nearing the Martin home, sparks were seen rising from the roof of the back kitchen. The fire ran into the home through the kitchen door and bumped into a step.

Stirling Wins Faulkner Trophy

Defeat Foxboro 7 To 2 In Final Game — Losers Had An Off Night With 8 Errors

The Faulkner Trophy, emblematic of the championship of the Centre Hastings Softball League, will rest in Stirling for the current year, as a result of Stirling defeating Foxboro in the final game of the play-offs on Thursday evening last by a score of 7 to 2. The game was played at the Fair Grounds and drew a large crowd of spectators.

Don Rodgers was on the mound for the winners and limited Foxboro to five hits, keeping them scattered. He blanked the opposition in every inning but the sixth when a single by Churchill, followed by a homer by "Tip" Tummon netted Foxboro their only runs. Rodgers was given splendid support by his mates, with D. Basdeo and "Mick" Armstrong featuring with some thrilling catches.

Tummon, on the mound for the losers, pitched an excellent game, giving up only three hits, but errors by his mates paved the way for the Stirling runs. The winners counted two in the first and five in the third when the losers infield blew up completely.

The game wound up a successful season for the League and Stirling, who had led the league from the first, proved themselves to be worthy champions.

In Ontario there are many hotels without adequate fire protection. What good is a rope hanging by a third story window? All hotels should have modern fire escapes and plenty of them. SALT IN RATIONS GOOD FOR PIGS

Due to the fact that brine or an excessive amount of salt will cause serious digestive disorders or even death to a pig, some feeders consider salt as harmful and dangerous to swine and do not include it in the ration. Experimental results have shown that salt is just as essential to a pig as to any other farm animal. The rate of gain is increased and a more economical use of feed results when salt is fed regularly.

Salt is essential for digestion and assimilation of feeds and should be supplied in suitable quantities, especially to animals that are kept enclosed in buildings. At the Dominion Experimental Farm, Brandon, Man., salt is included in the protein-mineral supplement, or mixed with the basal meal mixture at the rate of one pound of salt with each hundred pounds of feed fed here if the magazine carries more for pigs of all ages.

Farmers Urged To Save Clover Seed

At a recent meeting of the Seed Marketing and Publicity Committee of the Ontario Crop Improvement Association, members were unanimous in their opinion that farmers should be encouraged to save fields of red clover for seed, provided there are sufficient indications that the crop will yield reasonably well. During recent years, says R. E. Goodin, secretary of the committee, supplies of red clover, as well as other clover seeds, have been limited. There is an excellent export outlet, but home supplies need to be built up, to provide requirements for maintaining regular crop rotations, and thus producing maximum crops for the efficient output of milk and meat products.

NO LEGAL MACHINERY

Although the labor dispute in the meat packing industry was a definite threat, particularly if it was a long affair, to the export trade since already the total of Canadian meat shipments was below actual commitments, yet it is pointed out here that the Canadian Government could not step into the case in the same manner as in war-on account of the legal machinery time when such threats were averted.

which was in operation at the time. Such wartime machinery, it is emphasized in Ottawa, cannot be used now and this answers many questions which have been asked why the Canadian Government did not move into the meat packing industry dispute in the same way as during the war when on several occasions work stoppages were prevented.

WOODEN COACHES

Following the tragic CNR train disaster near Winnipeg not so long ago, there have been discussions here why the major Canadian railways do not get rid of wooden coaches but reliable information indicates that the railways have been trying to do so for a long time, though they were unable to accomplish it during the war and since on account of the heavy demands for their services which they have tried hard to maintain. In fact it is reported here that the matter of wooden coaches has been under discussion for many years and the railways have been anxious to retire them as soon as possible, with a hint being heard now that these efforts may be speeded up soon.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATION

It seems as if the "little man", the consumer, will soon have a powerful national organization to look after his interests across Canada because it is revealed in this capital that a two-day meeting is taking place in Ottawa for the purpose of organizing a permanent consumer association, with this gathering starting here on Sept. 25th. It is understood that the general objective of this proposed organization is to develop a more enlightened opinion on economic affairs and consumer interests.

ATOMIC AGE AND FERTILITY

Persistent stories have been heard in Canada that human fertility has been affected by radioactivity but according to Dr. C. J. Mackenzie, Chairman, National Research Council, of Canada, Ottawa, human fertility at Chalk River, where Canada's atomic energy establishment has cost about $20 million and where some 160 nuclear physicists are employed, has not affected, with the disclosure that in face of the radioactivity there the birth rate is four times the Ontario average, though the average age of the staff is about 32 years.

CONDITIONAL SALES

Following a meeting in Ottawa, a model draft law in conditional sales has been adopted by a committee of legal experts and it will be recommended to the respective provincial legislatures for enactment. This law would bring into harmony and up-to-date the regulations throughout Canada respecting the important subject of the sale and purchase of merchandise on conditional sale agreements. It is understood that this law dealt with such matters as the requisite notice required to parties concerned before the vendor may repossess goods sold in this manner, various items affecting conditional sale contracts and with respect to the registration of such agreements. Special provisions were also recommended concerning the purchase and sale on extended payment basis of such commodities as electric refrigerators, radios, automobiles and many others.

NO COMMENT BUT...

There have been numerous rumors flying around Parliament Hill lately about a prospective loan from the United States but officials refuse even to comment on the subject when asked about it. Likewise, questions about British Foreign Minister Bevin's proposals for U.S. "redistribution" of gold or a customs union which would virtually eliminate tariffs between countries of the Commonwealth have found official rather non-committal enthusiasm, if not downright disapproval.

SAID IN THE CAPITAL

"People have been croaking and groaning about the future of British for the last one hundred years or more but you need have no fear," said Britain's Lord Chancellor Viscount Jowitt during a visit here, remarking "Britain is still a good bet."

"I'll be greatly disappointed if I die before I see plutonium in use to create energy," commented Reconstruction Minister Howe in talking about atomic energy.

"English is becoming the universal language," declared Carl B. Rix, president of the American Bar Association while attending a gathering in the capital.

"The income of workers by way of wages and salaries has reached a new record total," said Labor Minister Mitchell.

"Our policy has been designed to prevent this whole business of embargoes," remarked former Under Secretary of State Dean Acheson of U.S. in an interview here.

"One predominant characteristic of our Canadian life is love of freedom," said A. N. Carter, KC, in a speech in Ottawa.

"Whatever the crisis, England will fulfill her destiny and with Canada make her contribution to the health and welfare of mankind," declared Rt. Hon. Sir Norman Birkett.

"Organized labor is proud of its heritage, proud to be citizens of this democratic country," stated Percy Bengough, president Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

WEEKLY WIND-UP

A new page if history was written here when Sardar Hardit Singh Malik, representative of the newly-created state of India, arrived to take up his duties as High Commissioner to Canada.

Dr. S. Y. Wu, Robert Sheng and C. C. Chang, all members of the Legislative Yuan, which is the Chinese equivalent to our own house of Commons, have been studying our democratic institutions and parliamentary processes in Ottawa.

While denials may be made that Finance Minister Abbott may become the new chief of the Liberal Party after the resignation of Prime Minister King, yet veteran observers along Parliament Hill are not so sure that he will not be running as he is one of the most popular members of the cabinet here.

Meanwhile, the man about whom so much is being rumored in regard to retirement, Premier King, seems to be enjoying widespread speculation, though saying little.

And while on the subject of rumors, such a rumor spread on a racetrack near the capital recently that a premium of 10 per cent had been placed on U.S. funds that crowds ran to the wicket to get U.S. silver in exchange for Canadian bills, showing the jittery condition of some people about the currency problem.

A new type of Mexican jumping bean is said to have been discovered by an inspector of the Plant Protection Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

It is said that the Federal Government is not bound to consult the provinces on the possibility of Newfoundland's entry into Confederation as a tenth province.

The visit of Mayor Stanley Lewis and a couple of aldermen to Moscow to attend the 800th anniversary of the founding of the Russian city was not financed by any other funds but the personal funds of these officials of the capital, with these officials bearing all the expenses of the trip, it is learned here.

Hello Homemakers! One of the best fuel-saving utensils is the pressure saucepan. It is ideal for large and small families, rich and poor, career women no home-makers.

1. Keep the cover handle and cooker handle tight.
2. Always keep sealing bands clean, and be sure vent pipe is open and clean before each use.
3. Be careful not to drop indicator-weight.
4. Never pour cold water in to a dry, overheated cooker as this may cause it to crack.
5. Be sure at all times to remove indicator-weight before attempting to remove cover. Do not force cover open if it seems to stick or is hard to turn — this means there is still pressure in the cooker and it should be cooled again in a pan of cold water.

2. Always keep sealing bands clean, and be sure vent pipe is open and clean before each use.
3. Be careful not to drop indicator-weight.
4. Never pour cold water in to a dry, overheated cooker as this may cause it to crack.
5. Be sure at all times to remove indicator-weight before attempting to remove cover. Do not force cover open if it seems to stick or is hard to turn — this means there is still pressure in the cooker and it should be cooled again in a pan of cold water.
6. If the cooker should leak, remove the gasket and turn it over. Insert it again.
7. When cooker is not in use, it is advisable to keep the lid off, or for compact storing, turn cover upside-down. Keep it in a dry place.
8. Do not insert indicator weight in water as this will cause the inside of it to rust.
9. Never strike the rim of cooker with spoon or knife. This will cause nicks and allow steam to escape.

WORKS TO KEEP YOUNG

A Montreal doctor of 80 says the way to stay young is to keep at work. There is much truth in his remark, and that is why those who come under an automatic and compulsory retirement plan need to provide for their leisure with secondary and absorbing interests of some kind.

80-MILE TOSS

Effect of the tornado force that swept Coe Hill two weeks ago was more pronounced Saturday with a report two documents were picked up by two residents of Ramsay county nearly 80 miles east of the damage area. A letter addressed to Harvey Nel, Coe Hill, and marked by the Coe Hill post office was picked up by John R. James, and Glen Manary discovered a 60-day driver's permit on his farm. It bore the name of a Coe Hill resident.

WHITE ROCK TRAIL

By J. Allan Dunn

CHAPTER VII

SYNOPSIS—Will MacLeod and his sister Marion had fled their uncle's trading post at Bison Crossing when sent by Alexander MacLeod to White Rock to deliver a message to Nipegosis, who still practised withcraft. Marion and Bill were hiding in a cottage near Nipegosis. Before Dick reached White Rock he was shot by a half-breed Kinoceti, who wanted to get the award for Bill's capture. Marion made a daily visit to Nipegosis, taking him broth and other food. On a visit to Nipegosis Marion learned that some friend was dying on the trail. Bill and Marion set out to find him. They arrived and found Dick with blood all over him and practically frozen to death, lying by the dying fire. They made plans to rush him back to White Rock. After taking him to their cottage they read the note and found that the Mounties were on their trail. Bill had to hide in a cave and soon afterwards the Mounty arrived.

"Good morning to you, Sergeant O. am looking for your brother."

"Good morning to you, Sergeant O. Rourke. My brother is not here."

She remembered his name! That had nothing to do with the thing in hand. There was a latent hostility in her even tones. Their greetings had crossed and rasped like the engaging of swords.

He looked about the somewhat bare but scrupulously neat room. They entered it from a central narrow passage that led from front to rear door. There were two doors opening to inner chambers on either side of the passage. A four-roomed, lightly-partitioned-off house.

"When do you expect him?"

"I do not expect him."

Her eyes met his in open challenge

They showed dislike. That, under the circumstances, made it a trifle easier.

"You're living here, in a deserted mining camp, alone?"

"I did not say so. I said my brother was not here and that I did not expect him."

"I have to put some questions," O'Rourke said. "It is not a personal matter, neither am I the prosecutor of your brother. I am merely doing my duty toward all citizens. The sworn duty of a Royal Canadian Mounted Police to maintain the right."

"I know the motto," she sneered. "Maintiens le Droit!" Well, Policeman, go ahead. But Will had nothing to do with the murder of Jacques Regnier."

"That is not for me to decide. But he should not have run away. That was a bad mistake."

She shrugged her shoulders. She had liked O'Rourke, had seen romance in his calling, in his record. Now she hated him. She stood at bay, using her wits against his.

"There are four rooms in the cabin?" he queried.

"Yes."

"The kitchen is behind this one?"

She nodded.

"You sleep cross the passage?" Then, as she merely nodded again, "The front or rear room?"

"The front is my bedroom. I am not occupying it now. I use the back one. There is a sick man in my room, a very sick man. Too sick to be moved. He is very ill. He has had an accident, lost a lot of blood."

She spoke with sudden gush of words as if she was breaking down, her eyes hunted, furtive.

O'Rourke looked at her pityingly. He had wanted to believe her when she said she did not lie, though not her statement. But he knew that a woman will fling aside everything to protect her own and he did not blame her.

"I'll take a look at him," he said.

There was no question but what the man was ill. He lay as if in a stupor and his pulse was low. The clothes were raised off one leg by a sort of cage. O'Rourke, with set lips, lifted the bedclothes, saw the bandaged limb, another bandage on the head.

"I can change the bandages, Policeman, if you think there are no wounds, she said sarcastically. "It will not hurt him. He is unconscious all the time, though he's not delirious," she added with obvious malice. "He is doing very nicely, but he cannot be moved."

O'Rourke said nothing. The man answered the description he had of Will MacLeod. The face was sunken from suffering, exposure and loss of blood, it was masked by whisker-growth, but he had no doubt this was his man. It did not dook as if he could be moved. That did not matter. He could wait, for a year if he had to. His orders were to come in with the murderer of Jacques Regnier.

"You are treating him your self?" he asked.

"With the advice of Nipegosis. He has supplied some herbs. You perhaps have heard of Nipegosis?"

He looked at her gravely. She was almost impudent in her insolence.

"I have heard of him," he answered. "He is yielding to treatment," she said. "It is rest he needs principally."

She stressed that point, he noticed, and it was then he remembered that she had not been surprised to see him. There had been one or two other things.

"Do you feed the dogs?" he asked her swiftly, too fast for her to properly parry.

"There are no dogs," she said with a gasp.

"I see. You merely throw out all your meat and soup bones in one place. You've used quite a lot lately." She had recovered herself.

"Soup is what he needs, Policeman. He care here on snowshoes. I will show them to you in the other room."

"I'll see them presently," he said crisply.

The situation was unexpected, unusual. Not right, somehow.

"I'll stay here for a while," he announced.

Her eyes held dislike, her breath came quickly. "Am I forced, under the law of His Majesty the King, and the Dominion, to board and lodge you under my own roof?" she asked with stinging sarcasm. "He cannot run away."

O'Rourke flushed a little. She was clever, but she was bitter. Once he had thought her sweet.

"You misunderstand me," he said. "I have my blankets. There are other cabins. I can rustle my food. I had no idea of staying in the house, only in here with your—your roomer—for a time. Under the law."

He saw her give a half apprehensive glance about the room, as if something might have been overlooked. Then it cleared.

APHIDS TROUBLING PESTS OF POTATOES

Not the least of the troublesome potato pests are the aphids. These very small insects are to be found in abundance in potato plants during the summer. They feed by sucking out the juice from the foliage and tender stems. As a result of their feeding habits, they cause considerable reduction in the annual yield of potatoes, says J. B. Adams, Division of Entomology, Dominion Department of Agriculture. Although this is of concern to potato growers, aphids bring about another condition which is far more serious. They are chiefly responsible for spreading the potato virus diseases from plant to plant. This they do in a way somewhat similar to that of mosquitoes in spreading malaria among humans. They feed upon a diseased plant, take the virus into their bodies, then, after moving to a healthy plant, inject the virus into the plant tissues.

Although various insecticides are now being used to control aphids, the cost of spraying or dusting is still high. Canadian scientists are working therefore, on a new plan to control these unwanted pests. In Fredericton and Woodstock, N.B., potatoes are being bred which are resistant to aphid feeding. For some reason as yet unknown, some varieties of potatoes are repulsive to aphids. These potatoes have little else to recommend them but through co-operation with the Horticultural Division of the Experimental Farms Service, they are being crossed with good commercial varieties and in time it is hoped to have potatoes which will be both commercially acceptable and highly resistant to attacks of aphids. This should prove to be a boon to potato growers.

Not only should potato yields be increased, but there should be a great decrease in the spread of the viruses transmitted by aphids.

There was a trail to follow from the cabin. But the sick man could not stay unconscious forever. And, when he roused from his stupor, O'Rourke was resolved to make him talk. The girl, too, he determined.

Will MacLeod and this other one generally resembled each other. In bed, drawn and pale under weather tan, slight discrepancies would pass unnoticed. Height and weight could not be well judged.

The girl had not fooled him, deliberately, tried to hold him to give her brother a start. It would not be easy to get much out of her. And, after all, she had not lied.

He heard her voice, pitched in anger, then in alarm.

O'Rourke charged across the passage, into the first room he had entered.

In a cave that opened off a ledge above Stoney River, which was frozen hard and fast, five men squatted about a small fire where they had been broiling meat, devouring it with their fingers, half raw.

The place was warm though the fire had been kept down, to offset smoke. There was a hot spring in the back that every now and then gurgled and gasped and threw off jets of steam for a geyser-like basin that caught its flow and returned it to the volcanic source.

The water was highly charged with mineral, principally silicate of lime. Drippings from condensing spray and moisture from the cave ceiling in the form of stalactites, stood up stumpily as stalagmites. Some of these were sooted, with the cave about them, by the fires of many generations. Primitive carvings on the walls showed that the tribes had used it since ancient times.

Only one of the five men was full-blooded, the others were breeds, though all were dressed as Indians for winter. The man who spoke had just returned from a trip that had ended him. He was the leader, known to them as Kinoceti—to white men as Peace River Jack.

His face was evil, savage. It held cunning and evidence of rispiration. His skin was swarthy and one cheek was seamed by a scar that reached his upper lip, twisted it to a leer.

He passed around a bottle that he had brought with him. It held "wine," a mixture of native port wine and straight alcohol. Already it inflamed them. They listened eagerly to his talk.

"This is the best thing of all. It lies on the same road, at the same place. The Mounted Man will be there by tomorrow to take his fool MacLeod. I shall be there to receive the reward for telling the police where to find him. One thousand dollars. You shall share in that, my friends," he lied glibly, "if you help me with the other matter in which you will also share and which will make us all rich."

As no agricultural or other restrictions applied, the new species of jumping bean is making its gyrations before those who are likely to buy such a novelty.

The "genuine" Mexican jumping bean has for years provided a nice profit for vendors at fairs and slide pitches in the United States.

A sample of the new "bean" has been added to the official collection of "insect" interceptions in Ottawa.

IT LOOKED for a while as if a temporary financial problem in the family might keep Mary from finishing "High". If she had to quit school to help the family income that would have meant good-bye to her hopes of becoming a nurse.

But here she is, starting her final year. Did her Dad suddenly come into some money?

No... and yes. He consulted his bank manager, who told him how the bank, through personal loans, often helped people to meet just such situations. Arrangements were made, and now Mary will take up nursing after all.

In 1946 Canada's banks made half a million personal loans to Canadian men and women.

Stirling Fair Patrons Treated To Splendid Programme On Friday

President and Directors De-serve Praise — Rain And Cool Weather Affect Crowd

Despite intermittent showers and a decided drop in temperature, which undoubtedly kept many from attending, Stirling Fair, held on Thursday and Friday last, proved one of the best in years, from the standpoint of exhibits and entertainment. President Ewart Bailey, and the Board of Directors had left nothing undone in an effort to improve the Fair and judging from the many fine compliments heard they were successful in their effort.

Mayor Fellwell, of Belleville, Opens Fair

Mayor Frank S. Fellwell officially opened the fair indicating his pleasure in opening this, one of the oldest fairs in the county. "Fall Fairs," he said, "were a splendid example of the co-operation which must be shown if the world was to continue at peace."

Fine Cattle Display

It was an especially big day for Holstein exhibitors, as they chose Stirling for their ninth annual county black and white day. They were well represented with over 100 head, and showed some fine stock to Judge Jim Henderson, of Kingston.

Other breeds were also prominent with Elmer Wood, Cookston, and Walter Lindenfield, of Stirling, being the main exhibitors in the Ayrshires and Garnet Kerr, of Campbellford, in the Jerseys.

Among the horse exhibitors were the Wilson Lumber Co., Murney Heath, Dave Hollinger and Earl Bonsteel.

In sheep and swine, Don Heath was the main exhibitor, while W. H. Patterson, Fred W. Houchin, of Stirling, and Clem Ketcheson, of Sidney, were prominent in the roots and vegetables.

Prominent competitors in the ladies' work division and the domestic science branch included Mrs. Ken Weaver, Miss Gena Spry, St. Paul's W.A., Mrs. L. E. Bryant and Mrs. G. R. Putnam, of Wooler.

Robert Hoard and Geo. A. Weaver were prominent poultry exhibitors.

Large Exhibit

The exhibit building was filled with produce of garden and field, home cooking that made the mouth water, and handiwork ranging from large quilts to school children's efforts of all kinds.

School Classes

The display in manual training, Household Science and Art in the main buildings by the pupils of the Stirling Schools was a particularly fine one and many favourable comments were heard on it.

Lamb's Electric Shop and Hatton Hardware had a display of equipment which brightened up the main building, while the latest in farm machinery and motor cars was exhibited on the grounds by district dealers.

Trails of Speed

The programme in front of the grandstand was one of the best in years, with Tommy Mason, of Peterborough, acting as Master of Ceremonies and Ross Turley, of Frankford, as starter for the trials of speed.

A new mobile starting gate for harness racing was used with great success. It consisted of a swing gate attachments made of light metal tubing, and mounted on the back of a sedan. The demonstrator and operator for the day took his "gate" a hundred yards up the track, and when the milling sulkius had breasted the metal barrier, the car shot forward, increasing speed and by the time the horses passed the starting line, they were in perfect formation. The gate closed, and the car veered off the track. This method eliminated the old jockeying trials for an even start, and was praised by officials and crowd. The results of the harness races were as follows:

The Ball Game

For the sports minded there was softball with arch rivals Glen Ross and Stirling Legion hooking up in a seven-inning game which concluded in a seven-all tie. In the tug-of-war Rawdon outpulled their Stirling rivals in two straight pulls.

Baby Show

It took two hours for Dr. George Faulkner, of Belleville, to judge the 15 entrants in the two classes of the baby show. Assisting in getting the young hopefuls ready for the Judge were Mrs. Don Campbell and Mrs. Ray Shortt.

Winners in the 1-6 months' class of the baby show were baby Bird, Wilson and Ashley, while in the 6-12 months' class were baby Clement, M. Bateman and Faulkner.

Letter To Editor With Reference To Recreational Centre

Dear Editor:

I would like, through the medium of your paper to voice a protest which is currently in the minds of many in Stirling and district. Before it is to late to do so, I think that the committee in charge of installing the floodlights on the recreation field should hold a general canvass to find out where John I. Public thinks is the logical place for the same.

I have heard many, many disapprovals of the chosen field, namely west of the High School, and absolutely not one approval. Furthermore most of these citizens, all ball fans, say they will not contribute any more to the fund until they can approve.

The Fair Grounds is the correct place for this public utility for these reasons:

1. There is unlimited parking space.

2. There is unlimited room for bleachers.

3. The present site is not large enough to accommodate a hard ball game.

4. There would be at Fair Grounds equipment to charge a fee, and fences to keep out those who will not help pay for the upkeep of lights.

5. There is room for refreshment booths adding to popularity of the spot and thus to its finances.

6. The local fair could really be a success and a source of pride to all who work to make it one.

Please, citizens!! Add your say to this before small-town politics take it out of your hands.

After leaving Stirling he was a pastor of Mark Street Church, Peterborough, where he served until his retirement a few months ago. He has served with honour several important offices of the United Church and has been active on numerous committees.

Bethel Church has been of late very nicely decorated. The interior job is the work of Mr. Maurice Bell, of Stirling. A new departure in church art is the reproduction of the Seal of The United Church of Canada upon the wall of the pulpit end. It is in conventional colouring and produced upon the background of a floriated cross.

Many visitors have halted a moment to see this striking and dignified design. On Anniversary Day the pastor will give an interpretation of the rendition as contained in the General Council's report on the "Great Seal of the Church", at its meeting in September 1944.

Uncle Hy Says

(Copyright 1947 H. M. Moore)

UNCLE HY

I thought I'd like a bit of change, so I jacked the car up in the shed. I wasn't noticing any more, I'd drive a lively horse instead. I traded here, I traded there, until I got one with some speed, a brownish gelding, standard bred, a pacer, very fast indeed.

He was a pretty little thing, as full of life as he could be and as it afterwards turned out, just a bit too smart for me, one afternoon he left the road and took me through a farmer's fence, and ruined a field of standing rye, and threshed that rye worth sixty cents.

The farmer took me into court, the amount involved by no means small, while I, didn't have enough the bailiff's orders to forestall, I lost my horse, I lost my rig, and last year at the country fair I saw that farmer drive that horse to beat the fastest racing there.

NEWS FOR THE BUSY FARMER

DECLINE IN OUTPUT OF DAIRY PRODUCTS

In its survey of the production of dairy products, the recent issue of the Current Review of Agricultural Conditions in Canada says that, while total milk production in May and June was slightly less in 1947 than in 1946, the 1947 production in July was approximately the same as in 1946. Creamery butter production continues to show some increase but increased consumer demand has kept stocks at a level just slightly higher than a year ago. Cheese production continues to decline. Production for the first seven months of 1947 totalled 68 million pounds, or about 16 million pounds less than in 1946. Cheese rendered to the Dairy Products Board for export to the United Kingdom totalled 184,811 boxes by August 8, 1947, as compared with 552,210 boxes by the corresponding date of 1946.

With restrictions lifted, ice cream production continues to increase substantially over 1946, with increases of 50 per cent and 41.9 per cent in June and July, respectively. Concentrated milk products are also showing increase in production, and up to the end of July, whole milk products were up 2.8 per cent, and milk by-products were up 24.3 per cent over the corresponding months of 1946.

WORKERS WANTED

With employment in this country being at its highest point in many years and a strong demand for certain types of workers being unsatisfied, it is believed that a determined drive will be started before long to bring much more immigrants to this country, especially from displaced persons camps in Europe where there are some very desirable prospects for Canada's labor ranks. Indeed, it would not be surprising to veteran observers here if the Government accelerated such a movement of persons to this country within the next several weeks using both air and sea transportation for such purposes, with the expectation being that several thousand ands of such men or women would be brought to Canada each month, especially since work for them is a certainty for some time to come according to officials here.

REGISTERED SEED IS A GOOD BUY

Farmers who have not yet secured their supply of seed for fall wheat should be well advised to secure Registered or Commercial No. 1 grades while supplies are still available, says R. E. Goodin, fieldman of the Ontario Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture. Registered seed is a good investment in many ways, he points out. In the first place, it is a guarantee of germination, purity of variety and suitability to the district. It also contains a minimum of disease, weed seeds and serious pests. In order to obtain these high standards, registered seed producers spend extra time and money. If they are to be encouraged in maintaining production of high seed standards, they must receive sufficient returns to make specialized seed production worth while.

But the buyer who pays the premium for registered seed will obtain many-fold returns. For instance, 50 cents per bushel extra for good seed means an added expenditure of $1.00 per acre for fall wheat, but the resulting crop should yield value many times the original cost. In the meantime, the grower has satisfaction in knowing he has used the best. With labour scarce on farms, it will pay individual farmers to buy a few bags of clean seed from a desirable source. A farmer cannot afford to use anything but high grade seed, particularly this year, when urgent demands prevail for fall wheat, either from a cash crop or a feeding standpoint.

Farmers who are unable to secure supplies of fall wheat seed from registered seed growers in their own localities may secure lists of seed available from their agricultural representatives, or direct from the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

VEGETABLE AND FRUIT HARVESTS ARE IMPERILED

A real threat to the vegetable and fruit harvests of Ontario exists in the serious shortage of labour to harvest these crops. Without an immediate influx of help into the Farm Service Force camps which supply labour to the growers, it will be impossible to have these crops taken out of the ground and off the trees. Alex McLaren, Director of the Ontario Farm Service Force, has an immediate and pressing need for 150 boys and young men, and 200 young women, to fill up the camps which were depleted when High Schools reopened. These camps are now nearly emptied, and they must be filled up by new workers to take care of the harvest labour needs. Boys and young men are especially wanted for camps in the vegetable areas, and there will be a demand for fruit pickers, both boys and girls, until the beginning of November. Girls are especially needed at once, as picking of Elberta peaches is about to start.

The growers are paying good wages for workers from these camps, where living conditions are of the best and workers have a happy and congenial atmosphere in which to work. A special plea is made to the Junior Farmers of the Province who have completed their own harvest operations to come forward and assist the fruit and vegetable growers in taking care of their harvests.

There is also an urgent need for about 200 day to day workers in the Toronto area. These workers are picked up to the city limits each morning and returned there every night, and receive good wages for the hours of labour in the vegetable fields and fruit orchards. City folks who can spend a day or two, or every day, in day work of this nature, will be very useful in saving these vital crops.

All young people, whether for Farm Service camps, or for day labour in the Toronto area, are urged to register at once with the Ontario Farm Service Force, 9 Richmond Street East, or to telephone to Adelaide 9461, as they can be placed immediately on harvest work.

"We here have much to be thankful for" and Mrs. Thrasher said in closing this Study Book "Great is the Company", it is a challenge to each one to read and study the Bible more during the coming year. A large Bible with lighted tapers was used as a worship centre throughout the study. The Pastor, Rev. N. Cole closed the meeting.

DESCRIPTION OF A BOY

If you have boys in your family you'll enjoy this description of a boy. After a male has grown out of long dresses and triangles, and has acquired pants, freckles and so much dirt that relatives don't care to kiss it between meals, it becomes a boy.

A boy is nature's answer to the false belief that there is not such thing as perpetual motion. A boy can run like a deer, swim like a fish, climb like a squirrel, bark like a mule, below like a bull, eat like a pig, or act like a jackass, according to climatic conditions.

The world is so full of boys that it's impossible to touch off a fire-cracker, strike up a band, or pitch a ball game without collecting a thousand of them. Boys are not ornamental; they're useful. If it were not for boys, the newspapers would go undelivered and unread and a hundred thousand picture shows would go bankrupt.

The boy is a natural spectator; he watches parades, fires, fights, football games, automobiles and planes with equal fervor. However, he will not watch a clock.

A boy is a piece of skin stretched over an appetite. However, he eats only when he's awake. Boys imitate their Dad's in spite of all efforts to teach them good manners. You can absolutely rely on a boy if you knew what to expect.

Boys are very durable. A boy, if not washed too often and if kept in a cool quiet place after each accident, will survive broken bones, hornets' nests, swimming holes and five helpings of pie.

Boys love to trade things. They'll trade fish hooks, marbles, broken knives and snakes for anything that is priceless or worthless.

When he grows up he'll trade puppy love, energy, warts, bashfulness and a cast-iron stomach for a bay window, pride, ambition, pretense and a bald head and will immediately start to say that "boys aren't what they used to be in the good old days."

A TIRED WOMAN'S EPITAPH

Here lies a poor woman who always was tired. For she lived in a house where help wasn't hired;

Her last words on earth were, "Dear friends, I am going Where washing ain't done, nor sweeping, nor sewing. And everything there will be just to my wishes.

For where they don't eat, there's no washing dishes;

I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing.

But having no voice I'll get clear of the singing.

Don't mourn for me now, don't mourn for me never,

For I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever."

The Daisy Mission Band held its September meeting at the home of H. Cooke. The president, Gerald Cooke, presided over the following program: Hymn "God Sees The Little Sparrow Fall", Scripture Lesson by Doris Donnan, Roll Call and business. The next meeting to be held at Marilyn Fitchett's home. The Study Book was taken by the leader, Mrs. C. Green, all repeated the Lord's Prayer, and the meeting was closed with a hymn. Mrs. Cooke served lunch.

Springbrook Couple Showered

On Wednesday evening about 150 friends and neighbours gathered at the Orange Hall, Springbrook, to honour Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thompson, who were married recently.

Rev. Christensen was chairman for the evening, for a programme which consisted of community singing, a debate, piano solo, vocal duet and several were called on for speeches who gave good advice to the bride and groom.

Mrs. Hiram Mumby read the following address and Glen Sine and Bob Cosby presented the guests of honour with a breakfast suite on behalf of those present.

The evening was concluded by a lunch and a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thompson, Dear Margaret and Joe:

We who end in and near Springbrook where Joe has grown up feel we cannot let the occasion of his marriage pass without our attention being drawn to him, also to his wife, whom we have learned to know and love in the past two years. Both of you are held in high respect.

We congratulate you Joe on choosing Margaret as your life partner, we feel you have picked one of the choicest girls and if she displays the same interests as a housewife as she has at her teaching profession and community activities, we may rest assured that you will live happily.

Margaret, we wish you all the happiness in your new position in life that you so well deserve. We have known Joe all his life and know that he is a good boy and comes from one of the finest of families. We feel that with him nothing but happiness is in store for you.

Considering Joe always being an industrious farmer it brings one of Arthur Burke's poems to our minds.

Considering Joe always being an industrious farmer it brings one of Arthur Burke's poems to our minds.

I've heard folks say a farmer's trials are not so very many. Of troubles real and worry too. He hasn't hardly any.

His life is one of joy complete, His pockets bulge with money; An all nights' sleep is what provides A disposition sunny.

He walks the hills much like a King, A monarch's right has he; The pride of ownership is his, Of valley, hill and tree.

The cows on pasture gather milk, The bees fly in with honey; The pigs just eat to make them fat, The hens just cackle money.

It's all a money making scheme, But this I do not know; How farmer's thought this racket out, And cornered all the dough.

Now into your home we ask you to take these gifts as a tangible token of our esteem. May they prove useful to you and at the same time remind you of your friends right at home. Our best wishes and kind thoughts will follow you and we trust that your life may be prosperous, full of hope and joy and may God's richest blessings rest on you and your home.

On Friday, September 19th, the young couple were honored by friends and neighbours in the Roslin district, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield Harrison.

The early part of the evening was spent playing games and later the gathering was addressed by Mr. Harold Hart, acting as chairman for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Thompson were invited to sit in conspicuously placed chairs, while Miss Helen Sills read an address signed on behalf of the community, and Miss Norma Bates presented a gift of money, for which Mr. and Mrs. Thompson graciously expressed their thanks, inviting their friends to visit them in their new home at Springbrook.

A social hour was enjoyed while delicious refreshments were served.

Dear Margaret and Joe:

We, your Roslin friends and neighbours have invaded your home this evening to extend to you both our very best wishes for a happy and prosperous married life.

With your willingness to co-operate in any activity when needed Margaret, you have won a warm place in the hearts of the entire community.

We congratulate you, on your choice of a life partner. Many here to night are not well acquainted with you, Joe, yet we know the respect in which you are regarded in your home community.

We realize that we will be losing you Margaret from this community, but our loss is another's gain.

We know that in your new surroundings, you will continue to give of your time and talent.

You carry with you our sincere wishes for happiness and prosperity in the future and as a tangible token of our affection, we ask you to accept this purse and may the gifts you purchase always remind you of this very happy occasion.

Signed on behalf of the community,
Norma White, Donald Bates, Don Sills, Ivan Clare, Connel Leslie and Joe Chisholm.

C.N.I.B. Teach Blind To Keep House In The Dark

This is the story of a woman whom we'll call Mrs. Johnson, of how she faced blindness and, with the help of The Canadian National Institute for the Blind, overcame its terrors. All across Canada you will find her—the mother who, through blindness, has faced eternal unemployment. If that were the end of the story it would indeed be tragic. But it is only the beginning and the ending is a happy one. Soon after she lost her sight, someone told Mrs. Johnson about The Canadian National Institute for the Blind. She got in touch with the Field Secretary in her district and a Home Teacher came to visit her. The first ray of light appeared on Mrs. Johnson's mental horizon—for the woman who had come to teach her was blind herself. She brought the glad tidings that, with patience and determination, Mrs. Johnson could learn to do most of her housework herself.

Each year at this time the people of Stirling are asked to help their blind neighbours by making a donation to The Canadian National Institute for the Blind. The campaign date this year is Saturday, September 27th. Remember Mrs. Johnson. You help other women like her when you give to the C.N.I.B. Please be generous.

The prospect of taking up the reins again so thrilled Mrs. Johnson that she began her lessons eagerly. It was not all plain sailing. She found it hard to adjust her fingers to the multiplicity of tiny dots which made up the Braille alphabet. But she was determined to learn Braille, not only for the pleasure of reading but for the pleasure of writing out recipes and labelling jars in her cupboard. After much patient practice, she mastered the art of reading with her fingers.

She learned a number of handicrafts—knitting, leather work, beltmaking and some weaving. Though handicrafts as such were of no particular interest to her, Mrs. Johnson realized that they did serve to make her hands surer of touch and quicker to identify objects. They were also a stepping stone to the sewing and darning which any good housewife must do.

Mrs. Johnson had been able to type before and with a quick refresher course from her teacher, she was soon typing letters to her friends.

In the business of actually running a house, her teacher had many tips to offer. She pointed out the importance of keeping everything in good order. If time of pears were always kept in the same place, Mrs. Johnson would waste no time looking for them. Her family was reminded not to move things around without telling their mother and not to leave obstacles on floor or stairs.

Gradually Mrs. Johnson gained confidence, began to experiment in her kitchen, using her senses of taste, touch, smell and learning to guide her. Before very long she was cooking as well as she ever had. She was doing her own washing, ironing, cleaning. And in her work she found the happiness that comes from being needed. Mrs. Johnson's rehabilitation was complete.

than it had been believed likely only a few weeks ago.

WHEN WINTER COMES

Warnings are heard in reliable quarters in Ottawa that fuel oil may be in short supply this coming winter and the fuel oil companies are not guaranteeing that they will be able to supply any new customers this year, with demands exceeding supplies. In fact, it is held that since the Federal Government granted special priorities to oil companies for steel for construction of additional storage tanks the oil business has been on its own and the Government is exercising no longer any control over fuel so that it would only move into the picture in the event of a national emergency.

These warnings are extremely important because there have been conversions from coal to oil-burning equipment during the past year or so and many people do not realize the supply situation. As far as coal is concerned, it is expected to be much the same as last year.

STRIKE VOTE

On the basis of reports in circulation here, the threatened strike of Canadian railway workers may not come about as soon as the man-in-the-street expects since the strike vote for or against such a strike would not lead immediately to action of this sort because there would have to be a joint meeting of all railway unions probably in the middle of October to determine the policy, with no strike anticipated until this meeting at least has been held.

HINTS OF THINGS TO COME

With the lifting of thousands of controls, it would logically be suspected by Canadians that the framework or legal structure of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board at the headquarters in Ottawa as well as in branches across the country will immediately drop almost all employees on their staff. However, it is reported here that, while some few hundred members of their staff would gradually be released of their duties, yet the reduction in staff would not be as great as it may seem probable to persons outside this agency of the Canadian Government because it is learned that some controls, especially on certain foods and rentals, are not an easy group to administer and, therefore, large staffs must be retained. In other words, the staff of the WPTB is being cut, but Canadians would be surprised to learn that out of the present 1,800 to 1,900 employees across Canada, only a few hundred are being released in face of the huge number of items removed from control.

GOOD CUSTOMER

The departure of Trade Minister MacKinnon, together with departmental officials and some prominent Canadian industrialists, for South Africa, regarded with more importance within Ottawa than outside of this capital, judging from reports heard on Parliament Hill. It seems that officials here are "seriously concerned" about the wave of trade restrictions sweeping certain countries and there is no doubt that it will not be long before the impact of these restrictions will be felt by business in this country which depends so heavily upon foreign trade to maintain this nation's present prosperity. South Africa, for instance, last year bought $68,500,000 worth of goods from Canada and we purchased there only $8,000,000, this being mighty good business. Now, apparently, Canada is willing to buy more there in order to keep the market. Consequently, the importance of this trade trip cannot be exaggerated by a long shot, especially when it is born in mind that in pre-war years Canada only sold about 17,000,000 in that rich market.

PROTECTING THE PUBLIC

Though the Standards Division in Ottawa is a relatively new governmental agency, yet reports here indicate that it is already showing some really startling results in its efforts to protect the public. Some time ago it made a move to protect the public when buying furs to avoid misrepresentation. Now, it is learned that another important step has been started towards solving the problem of standards in materials and manufactured articles used in construction, hoping thereby to protect the builder by simplification of the work of architects, contractors and suppliers and removing misrepresentation possibilities.

Likewise, it is said that the subject of standards for consumers protection in buying textiles is under careful study.

SAID IN THE CAPITAL

"I have seen some literature, some of it Communist, which urges now Canadians to return to their native countries," said Secretary of State, Colin Gibson in a speech.

"We have very strong information to indicate that the veterans' preference outside Ottawa has been sidestepped," declared A. E. Johnson in this capital at a special meeting of the Dominion Command of the Dominion Civil Servants War Veterans' Association.

"We Greeks can never forget the kindness of Canada for sending us food and supplies during the very bad years of the war," emphasized General Demetrios Botsaris who visited here.

with his reputation as a great soldier and scholar being known widely.

"We want to buy many things that you grow and make in Canada and United States, but, we can only buy them if you buy an equivalent amount of goods and services from us," stated Sir Ian Fraser, president of the British Legion, informing that Britain's production now is between 10 and 20 per cent better than in pre-war years.

"We are in the mission field are continually asking ourselves to what extent the church at home is spiritually equipped to meet the requirements of world-wide dissemination of Christianity," commented Dr. Ralph Collins, missionary to West Africa, while in Ottawa for a short stay.

"We are trying to get the Department of Transport to send out questionnaires with the licenses so that we can make an accurate assessment of public taste," said A. D. Dunton, Chairman, Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, at a meeting here.

"The wage earner cannot afford to meet rising costs," remarked G. W. Goodwin at a meeting of city fathers in this capital.

"Our supply of American dollars will soon be exhausted, and, if in the meantime nothing is done to alter the situation, there will be a crisis in this country," said Hon. John Bracken, leader of the Official Opposition in a speech.

OATH AND FREEDOM

Ever since the Canadian Government's Civil Service Commission started to ask each employee to take an oath of loyalty and secrecy, the impression has been given throughout Canada that the freedom of these public servants has been restricted by these processes.

However, inquiries in Ottawa have shown that the administration of such an oath to civil servants across the country was not intended to limit their freedom as individuals.

The only limitation was that this oath was intended to impress them with the fact that they are working for the state and that confidential information reaching them must be kept secret as provided by regulations.

Their own political views or other opinions are not affected and conversations with many of the civil servants in this capital indicate that, in face of the stories about their supposed restrictions, the civil servants themselves feel quite free to express themselves as ordinary citizens of Canada, to secrecy only in their work for the state. That is all there is to these governmental restrictions, it is emphasized.

WEEKLY WIND UP

It is proposed to instal a thousand parking meters in this capital on a trial basis to solve the traffic problem here.

The newly appointed Deputy Commissioner of Penitentiaries, Joseph McCullay, was a headmaster at a Canadian College for two generations and it is understood that he plans to give immediate attention to youths committed to federal penal jails.

Four of Britain's leading scientists are coming to Canada for discussions and exchange of information on research programs by Commonwealth members, it is learned.

It was noted that, at a meeting of the CBC governors here, some top officials of the organization were present in Ottawa, including some whose names were mentioned in connection with recent rumors about "internal disputes".

Lady Iris Mountbatten paid a visit to this capital, stopping at a local hotel in the business centre.

Labor Minister Mitchell, who intended to visit displaced persons camps in Europe shortly, has cancelled his trip abroad.

SUCCESS STORY

Typical of the successful placement of blind workers in industry is the story of Bill Watson. That isn't his real name, but he is a real person. At the age of 22, Watson, who had been doing farm and factory work, lost his sight. Idleness followed until his mother got in touch with the local C.N.I.B. field secretary. Watson was an independent type of lad and very eager to learn the ways of the sightless and to earn his own living. He was brought to Toronto. A C.N.I.B. home teacher, an experienced blind woman, began to teach him Braille and handicrafts. After two months her report was that he learned Braille faster than any of her other pupils. He immediately took advantage of the Braille Library service.

Next came the question of employment. He had a talk with the head of the Employment and Placement Department and it was decided to give him a training. The C.N.I.B. operates a number of concession stands in large office buildings where cigarettes, tobacco, soft drinks and other small articles are sold. Bill began to work with an established stand manager who taught him tricks of the trade. Quickly Bill became familiar with stand operation and was placed in a

Soon after this, a stand became vacant and in a northern mining town and Bill Watson was sent up to become its manager. During the four years he spent there, he became a well-known and popular figure in the community and built up a very successful business. With the closing down of some of the mines and a general exodus from the town, the C.N.I.B. decided to close the stand. Bill came back to Toronto and a job was found for him in a large war industry. Once again Bill proved his worth and his employers were completely satisfied. With the end of war production Bill changed his job and for the past two years has been employed with a tool company. He is able to perform a variety of jobs with a high degree of efficiency. He is popular with his fellow workers and his cheery manner is as good as a tonic to them.

This is a story of which the Institute can be proud. Almost every service which the C.N.I.B. has to offer was given to Bill Watson. Through these services he is to-day a busy and a happy man — standing firmly on his own feet. For such self-reliance is the desire of the Institute for every blind man and woman. Its services are designed to guide the blind to make their own way in the world.

You share in this work when you contribute to the current campaign of The Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Think how you value your own independence — and be generous.

WHITE ROCK TRAIL

By J. Allan Dunn

CHAPTER VIII

SYNOPSIS—Will MacLeod and his sister Marion had fled their uncle's trading post at Bison Crossing when sent by Alexander MacLeod to White Rock to deliver a message to Nipegosis, who still practised witchcraft. Marion and Bill were hiding in a cottage near Nipegosis'. Before Dick reached White Rock he was shot by a half-breed Kinoceti, who wanted to get the reward for Bill's capture. Marion made a daily visit to Nipegosis, taking him broth and other food. On a visit to Nipegosis Marion learned that some friend was dying on the trail. Bill and Marion set out to find him. They arrived and found Dick with blood all over him and practically frozen to death, lying by the dying fire. They made plans to rush him back to White Rock. After taking him to their cottage they read the note and found that the Mounties were on their trail. Bill left to hide in a cave. When the Mounties arrived he believed that the unconscious Dick was Bill, and stayed to watch him.

"But first the Mounted Man takes MacLeod, the nephew of the man who calls himself The MacLeod, who will be humble when the nephew hangs. Then I am minded to talk with the sister, if the Mounted Man does not take her long. In that case it is wisest not to interfere. If you kill one of those red-coated devils they send another, and yet another."

"So, although she would amuse me, we will not be foolish about that. In the school they sent me to they had a tale of a dog who crossed a bridge and stopped to look at his reflection. He had a bone in his mouth, a good bone, but he dropped it into the water and tried to get the other one, which, of course, had vanished. He lost the substance for the shadow."

"T too, have heard the story," said one of the breeds tipsy.

"Then you should know what I am talking about."

"What is this affair which will make us all rich?" asked another.

"My friends," said Kinoceti, emptying the bottle. "You know that white miners found the gold at White Rock which the Indians knew long ago was there. We did not take it, because it would have been taken away again immediately. So the white miners built the camp and got a lot of gold for a time."

"Then there was no more gold. The white rock reef had ended."

"No one goes to White Rock for gold any more. No white man. But there is a man named Siganoy—he knows him, my friends!"

"An old fool who takes a young squaw," said one of them.

"She would not have gone to him if he had not tempted her," Kinoceti returned. "She is very young and looks well to the eye." He spoke complacently, with a self-conscious smirk. His clothes were worn, but they were those of a dandy.

"He has bought her many things from LaRoche, the trader at Thirty Mile. Dresses, shawls, ribbons, perfume, rings. And, because he was an old fool and she was a young wife, it was not hard for her to wheedle out of him how he paid for these things. With white rock that was heavy and speckled with gold, as a trout is speckled."

"But he would not tell her where he got it until he knew he was dying of lung fever. That was last week. He is dead now. He will buy her no more gifts. But he told her where the white rock came from. And she told me."

"Where? At White Rock? You said it was the same place where this young MacLeod stays."

"At White Rock, yes. Just where, I do not know. Siganoy told his squaw to ask Nipegosis. Siganoy was the son of a niece of Nipegosis. So maybe Nipegosis will tell his squaw, when she asks him, after she is through her month of mourning. In the meantime we will ask Nipegosis. I think it is likely that Nipegosis told Siganoy where to find the lode the white men lost. Such things happen in rock. They call them faults."

"I know that," broke in the previous interrupter. "I know what faults are in rock. And I know also it is foolish to ask Nipegosis where it is. He might have told the son of his niece because of the blood between them, but he will not tell us."

"He'll tell me," said Kinoceti. "I am not afraid of Nipegosis. He does not care for gold. He is too old. He has not long to live, yet like all men, he treasures what he has left of life. He will barter that, with us, for the white rock. He can still suffer."

"Nipegosis is a wizard. You are crazy. He will cast a spell on us," said Suni, the full-blood, energetically. "They say he can change a man to stone, turn him into a beast, kill him with cramps, make him blind."

"They say?" laughed Kinoceti. "I have learned about wizards. They play tricks. But they feel pain like another man. I tell you," he boasted, "Nipegosis will tell—and gladly, if you are not cowards. If you are, I will do this thing alone."

They did not like it. And Kinoceti did not want to handle it alone. He would have to be drunk when he did it and he had more bottles of caribou stowed away for such an occasion.

The full-blood had walked to the mouth of the cave. Now he called to them, pointing across the river.

They crouched, their sight like eagles, watching the progress of a sled on the far side of the river, beneath them, evidently making for the caves. They speculated on it, a little drunk, but sharp enough for observation, comparing notes and comments.

"It is Will MacLeod," said Kinoceti, finally. "I do not know what has happened, but his sister is not with him. He travels alone—and he travels fast."

"He saw the Mounted Man coming," said one of them. "He had time to harness his dogs. The Mounted Man would be on snowshoes, no horse."

Kinoceti did not agree.

"The police are to smart," he said. "They lost sight of him after the killing. Now they will have sent out one of their best. He would not be such a fool as to let young MacLeod see him first. No something has frightened him. He may have been warned."

"I saw Red Deer trail to White Rock two days ago," a breed suggested.

"That is not news," snarled Kinoceti. "Red Deer came from the north west. He took moose meat to Nipegosis. It is that old fox, Alex MacLeod."

Three men, now, had styled The MacLeod a fox. Two white men and a breed. Their agreement was likely to be correct. None of them were fools. Kinoceti's judgment was almost as swift as that of O'Rourke. Almost as true. But he did not stay to analyze it very far.

"He left his sister behind," he repeated. "Perhaps to throw dust in the eyes of the Mounted Man. I am going to White Rock. You—three of you—may come with me. One stays to watch young MacLeod. He comes to hole-in here at the caves. Rub out those ashes, get rid of the bones and meat. He knows the trail. He must not be made suspicious. He's worth a thousand dollars. You, Suni," he went on to the full-blood, remain behind. Watch him. Trail him if he leaves. Do not let him go too far. The reward says 'Alive or dead,' but they would rather have him alive. And it is only I, Kinoceti, who may collect that reward."

"Does not the Mounted Man get some of it?"

"They are not permitted. They work for the wage of a clerk, for glory and a medal," scoffed Kinoceti. "Clean up the cave. Young MacLeod will be here inside of half an hour. We will not lose sight of him, but now we go to White Rock. Perhaps we may clear up the matter of the gold before the Mounted Man arrives."

"Then we can tell him where to find young MacLeod, and, once on that screech, he will think of no other. They are good hounds, these Mounties; they stay on the trail they are started on."

He was idle while the others worked. He had in him the qualities of a leader, though his causes were evil. He hunkered down in the mouth of the cave, watching Will MacLeod's dogs, tiring now, laboring through slushy snow towards the river.

He thought of Alexander MacLeod, who would have employed him to string snowshoes at a fifth of what MacLeod would sell them for. Of the knowledge of the lost gold seek he would win from Nipegosis. Of the fools working hard in the cave who thought he would share it with them. But, most of all, he thought of Marion MacLeod.

He remembered the time when she had looked at him as if he were dirt—through him, as if he had been glass. Once in the store at Bison Crossing. He had swaggered in, resplendent, barbaric. It had been the day before a Saint's Day, and the place was packed. He had gone deliberately to the counter where Marion was helping and bought things after thing he did not need. He gathered the articles together at the last, paid for them.

"Do not wrap them," he had said in his best school English. "They are for you."

He had hit him across the face with a whip, if she had been the one who made the scar he bore, he could not have felt it more plainly. He felt it now. He had been drinking a little.

"Do you think I am a squaw?" she had asked him, and turned away. She had not told her brother, her uncle, nor any of the white trappers, who would have thrashed Kinoceti for his presumption, thrust him out of Bison Crossing forever. But her look ranked like a festering wound.

Now he was going to play even. He had waited a long time for the chance played desperately to get it. He was going to make the most of it, glut his Indian nature, warped by crossbreeding, with revenge.

As Will MacLeod crossed Stoney River, its ice already treacherous under the chinook, three men with Kinoceti, slid through the leafless brush like lizards, took the trail for White Rock.

The blood remained behind. It suited him well enough. To keep an eye on this fugitive from white man's justice has one thing, to beard Nipegosis in the Conjuror's own house was quite another. He erased himself from the landscape. He had meat. It was getting warm. He would watch this thousand dollar refugee. And if Nipegosis destroyed the rest, as he Suni, thought surely would happen, he Suni, whom many of his tribe thought foolish, would collect the reward and live happily ever afterward—at least, as long as the thousand dollars held out.

Me might even aspire to the late bride of Siganoy, might get from Nipegosis the secret of the lost lode.

Kinoceti led his three henchmen into White Rock in late afternoon. He had been strongly tempted to steal Will MacLeod's sled and dogs, but he fought off the impulse. He requested Aesop's fable to himself. "Do not trade the shadow for the substance." So the white men had taught him, and it was sage advice.

On the way they stopped at one of his caches of caribou. Kinoceti liked it, but it was his "medicine." He knew how to use it. His three helpers were befooled when they got to White Rock. He himself was merely charged with devility.

"Service With A Smile"

Bride-To-Be Honoured

On Thursday evening, September 18th, Mrs. H. A. Morrow, was hostess for a cup and saucer shower in honour of Miss June Crosby, Belleville, who previously spent two years as school teacher at River Valley.

The rooms were prettily decorated in a colourscheme of pink and white, with an arch-effect in front of the fire-place, where June was given a seat of honour.

Little Miss Linda Anne Morrow

presented the bride-elect and her mother with pretty corsages after which all enjoyed playing some novelty games and contests.

Miss Eleanor Taylor read an address on behalf of those present, after which a large assortment of balloons were presented containing instructions for a treasure hunt. These resulted in nineteen lovely cups and saucers for which June very graciously thanked her friends.

The girls then formed a circle around June and sang "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow", after which the hostess served dainty refreshments.
